FREAK WEATHER TAKES DEATH TOLL OF 65

EAST SUFFERS UNDER HEAT AND HUMIDITY

HIGH MARK OF 95 DEGREES IN BOSTON AND WASHINGTON

FREAK STORM IN COLORADO ENDS THE HIGH TEMPERATURE THERE

More than 50 deaths were caused in the United States by the heat wave, which continued unabated today throughout the east.

Approximately 12 of the deaths were due to drownings or lightning. The remainder were attributed directly to the heat.

The west and middle west had found some relief today from heat and freak storms, but promised showers had materialized only at a few points in the east.

Deaths recorded in the 24 hours ending shortly before noon today included:

New York and New Jersey, 13; Chicago, 10; Philadelphia, 5; Buffalo, 2; Detroit, 2; Baltimore, 3; Ohio, 5; Pennsylvania, 5; Morgantown, W. Va., 2; Schenectady, N. Y., 2, Walsenburg, Colo., 2; Albany, N. Y., 1; New London, Conn., 1; Cliftondale, Mass., 1; Erie, Pa., 2. Total—65.

Great suffering was caused through the east and dozens of prostrations were reported. Many stores and offices closed early and production was cut down in some industries.

A death toll of 65, mostly due directly to the heat, has been taken in the United States by freak weather in the last two days.

Most of the east continued to suffer today under extreme temperatures and high humidity, with the only hope of relief held out by weather forecasters in the promise of possible showers later in the day.

Boston, New York, Baltimore, Philadelphia, Washington, Pittsburgh and other cities were suffering intensely. A high mark of 95 was reached in Boston and Washington and 91 in New York.

Relief came to the midwest today after a cooling rain. A freak storm in Colorado ended a period of high temperature there.

The majority of deaths occurred in metropolitan New York and near by New Jersey. Nine were attributed directly to the heat. Three were drowned and Ignatz Mestricki, overcome by heat while walking on the railroad tracks at Perth Amboy, N. J., was killed by a train.

Before reief came to Chicago, 10 had died there. The other deaths came from points in New York, Pennsylvania, Ohio and other eastern states.

In addition to the heat deaths, others died from lightning and freak storms. A woman was killed by lightning in Massachusetts, while a mother and son were swept to death by a seven-foot wall of water when a cloudburst caught their automobile in an arroyo near Walsenburg, Colo.

The United States was not alone in suffering from natural disturbances, which apparently have been prevailing over many parts of the earth. Storms, floods and earthquakes have been reported from Europe, Asia and South America. Argentina and Chile have been suffering acutely from extreme cold and blizzards.

ANOTHER TORRID DAY FOR NEW YORK

New York, July 14.—With nine already dead, another day of torrid heat broke over New York this morning.

At seven A. M., the temperature was around the eighties, with every indication that yesterday's record for the year would be exceeded.

At 9 A. M., the temperature was 78, the same as at that time yesterday. The humidity, however, was 84, much higher than yesterday and the suffering was correspondingly greater.

In addition to the nine deaths in the metropolitan area attributed directly to the heat, four persons were drowned seeking relief in nearby waters. Approximately 20 were overcome and required medical treatment.

CLOUDBURST DROWNS TWO

Denver, Colo., July 14.—A cloudburst which drowned a mother and her small son and hail storms which packed streets of several towns with a foot of cracked ice left Colorado one of the coolest places in the United States today.

The thermometer had mounted to 77 when a low pressure area hitting the state late yesterday caused the mercury to toboggan. A few hours later a terrific rain storm all but engulfed parts of southern Colorado.

At the same time the heaviest hail storms ever recorded in Colorado did thousands of dollars damage in the central part of the state.

Mrs. Leona Stearn, 27, and her 3-year-old son Ralph, were drowned when their automobile stalled in an arroyo near Walsenburg. Shortly after the automobile stopped in the dry creek bed, the cloudburst broke.

In a few minutes more the automobile was carried away by a seven foot wall of water which struck without warning. Bodies of Mrs. Stearn and her son were found three miles away.

At Eaton crops were destroyed and thousands of dollars damage was done by hail. After falling steadily for thirty minutes, hailstones the size of walnuts were piled a foot deep in the streets.

All crops in a four mile long area were ruined. Similar conditions prevailed at Ault where a strong wind did added damage.

THUNDERSHOWERS EXPECTED AT CAPITOL

Washington, July 14. — Thundershowers this evening are expected to break the heat of the last two days here.

Temperatures here yesterday ranged from 95 at the weather bureau to 98 on Pennsylvania Avenue, with humidity high. One man was prostrated.

Hundreds slept in open automobiles on the speedway, and others stretched out in East Potomac park last night.

CROP PROSPECTS BETTER IN MIDWEST

Chicago, July 14.—Cooling rains today had broken the heat wave which gripped the middle west and improved crop prospects throughout the area.

Although most of the small grain has been harvested, the corn crop and late hay crops will be much improved, according to agricultural authorities. Six deaths were attributable to heat in Chicago yesterday.

EXPECTS HEAT WAVE TO BREAK UP SOON

Washington, July 14.—The heat wave will break tonight and tomorrow under the cooling influence of general thunder showers which will visit the whole weltering area east of the Mississippi, Chief Forecaster Mitchell of the weather bureau said today.

"I am not predicting any unusually cool weather," he said, "but there will be some relief throughout the east. Thunder showers over the west have brought cooler weather there."

Yuma, Arizona, was the country's hottest city yesterday with a mark of 108 while Phoenix, Ariz., and Red Bluff, Cal., each with 106 were the next hottest. Eureka, Cal., was the coolest place with a maximum of 60 and a minimum of 50, while San Francisco was a close second with a maximum of 64 and a minimum of 54.

RECONSTRUCTING QUAKE SHAKEN HOLY LAND

London, July 14.—(UP)—Work of reconstruction in Trans-Jordania and the Holy Land, scene of Monday's earthquake, has begun and relief expeditions have discovered chaotic conditions, said advices received here today.

No accurate compilation of the death toll has been made because of poor communication facilities but latest reports put the number of dead at near 400.

The Jerusalem correspondent of the Daily Express revealed that Nablus was hardest hit, with 60 known dead and 250 injured, many critically. The whole town is in ruins with more than 100 buildings demolished or damaged, according to the correspondent.

Duluth, Minn., July 14.—(UP)—Automobile accident fatalities in Duluth were increased to seven for the year when Christ Peterson, 55, died Wednesday night from injuries received when he was struck by an automobile July 2.

Great Britain, Japan and United States In Outline of Their Respective Defense Needs

POSTPONED PLENARY SESSION OPENED TODAY

AMERICANS CLAIM IT'S IMPOSSIBLE TO PREPARE IN PEACE FOR WAR CONTINGENCIES

BRIDGEMAN EXPLAINS WHY HE ASKED FOR A PLENARY CONFERENCE

By HENRY WOOD
(United Press Staff Correspondent)

Geneva, July 14—In a hotel dance hall converted for the moment into a meeting room for diplomats, delegates to the tripartite naval conference sat today and listened to speeches outlining the defense needs of Great Britain, Japan and the United States.

A horseshoe table of the League of Nations council was installed in the place where usually a jazz band delights the guests of the Hotel Des Bergues.

In the center of the horseshoe was Hugh S. Gibson, American minister to Switzerland and chairman of the conference, at his right were W. C. Bridgeman, first lord of the British admiralty, and Lord Cecil; at his left were Baron Saito and Viscount Ishii.

The plenary session, postponed since Monday ostensibly because of the death of Kevin O'Higgins, vice-president of the Irish Free State, but more likely in reality because of wide divergence of opinion among the three nations on limitation of cruisers, opened with tributes to O'Higgins.

Then Gibson arose to outline the events to date of the conference.

"I am happy to report," he said, "that great progress has been made to date during the nine sessions of the technical commission and by private conversations among heads of the delegations.

"The commission has laid foundations for drafting a treaty in the event we finally reach an agreement.

"We are in a position to make rapid progress from now on."

Gibson announced that the plenary session had been called at the request of Bridgeman.

Viscount Ishii spoke at length on the Japanese attitude. He said his nation was hopeful that the discussions be continued and was disposed to make every possible concession.

He proposed that the United States and Great Britain limit themselves to 10 cruisers of 10,000 tons with Japan having seven or less.

Bridgeman was the next speaker. "It was a "happy augury," he said, that agreement had been reached on the question of capital ships. Then he outlined his country's stand on the cruiser problem.

"We desire only to limit the size of smaller type cruisers," he said, "and also to fix their armaments at six-guns so they cannot become offensive weapons.

"We desire also to fix the lowest maximum tonnage until we know how many cruisers with eight-inch guns other nations propose to build. Otherwise we would be asked to accept inferiority.

Viscount Jellicose, another British delegate, followed Bridgeman.

His technical summary of the British stands was epitomized in the following paragraph:

"England's principal lines of communication total 80,000 on which, in a typical day, 9,500,000 tons of British shipping operate, making protection a necessity. Hence our claims to an adequate number of cruisers."

Bridgeman said he asked for a plenary session because "it seemed to me the atmosphere was being vitiated by gross misrepresentations of the British case in certain quarters."

"Some of the trouble, I fear," he continued, "has been caused by parties whose desire and interest would lead them to rejoice at the failure of the conference.

Every little incident has been used to make mischief and every atom of partial information has been dragged from the text to create friction and ill will."

Gibson replied to Viscount Jellicoe's point.

"The American delegation," he said, "entertains very serious misgivings relative to an effort to prepare in peace for all possible contingencies of war.

"This same duty of hunting down raiders may fall on any one of our navies during the war time, but if we endeavor in time of peace to build our forces for this duty we shut the door to all possibility of naval limitation."

FISH HATCHERIES TO DISTRIBUTE FRY TO LAKES

St. Paul, July 14.—(UP)—Purchase of six three-ton trucks to distribute fish fry to lakes from hatcheries was made today by H. W. Austin, state purchasing commissioner, for the state game and fish department.

As a result of the purchase the work of depositing the fish fry in lakes will be done entirely by state employes.

Each truck has a special body to effectively handle 60 10-gallon cans of fish and 1,000 pounds of ice.

"COOLIDGE LUCK" STIRS ALL OF RAPID CITY

WHEN IT HAILS IN FIELDS, IT DOES NOT TOUCH "CAL" IN OPEN CAR

WHEN OTHER FISHERMEN HAVE BAD LUCK, HE HOOKS TEN TROUT

By PAUL R. MALLON
(United Press Staff Correspondent)

Rapid City, S. D., July 14.—The saying "Coolidge Luck" has become a proverb out here where the president has established his summer White House.

When it hails in the fields beside him, Mr. Coolidge in an open car is untouched; when it rains, there is no downpour near him and when other fishermen have bad luck he hooks ten trout.

The proverb has become so famous that townspeople here are using it as a by-word and say: "Let's go with President Coolidge and keep out of the rain."

The story started when sometime ago Mr. Cooliodge left the executive offices shortly before hail the size of tennis balls beat down upon the town. Fear was felt for his safety. A party was organized to go out to rescue him but word was later received that he had ridden home in perfect ease and comfort and had never seen the hail.

The story of the president's immunity to misfortune is not new.

Years ago in Massachusetts Mr. Coolidge gained renown for his luck. The manner in which he was nominated as vice president and similar developments later created the phrase there that nothing could stop "Coolidge luck."

Out here his good fortune has been even better and farmers are beginning to thank him for bringing the best crops they have had in ten years. Real estate developers too are glad that he selected this place for his summer home.

Mr. Coolidge, too, is doing all he can to aid advertisement of the country. He has intimated that he would like to provide a permanent summer White House in this region and local citizens are encouraging him to promote their district.

GET TRIPLE GALLOWS READY IN ILLINOIS

200 POUND SAND BAGS USED TO TEST EQUIPMENT

3 SLAYERS OF PRISON WARDEN TO BE HANGED AT JOLIET

Joliet, Ill., July 14. — (UP)—While the boom of 200-pound sand bags used in testing the triple gallows resounded through Will county jail, officials made plans today to thwart the schemes which they believe are designed to prevent execution of three slayers of a prison warden tomorrow.

The first effort to interfere with plans for the execution was made through the courts by Mary Belle Spencer, attorney who said she represented Luis Lupian, Mexican consul for Chicago. Miss Spencer filed a petition in Will Circuit court asking a sanity hearing for Robert Torrez, one of the convicted trio.

The proceeding, which was to be heard today, is identical with the "stir crazy" plea which has kept Russell Scott, former Canadian millionaire, from the gallows for more than two years. Attorneys contend Torrez has become insane since he has been confined in jail.

The other threat of an effort to stop the execution was a report to Will county authorities that friends of Charles Ouschowski and Walter Stalesky, the other two men to die for killing Warden Peter M. Klein, planned to raid the jail and free the condemned.

Fifty special policemen were stationed in and about the jail today in addition to regular deputy sheriffs as a precautionary measure.

Attorneys declared today there is no alternative but to grant a hearing on the sanity petition. They were to appear in court today before Judge Frederick R. Hill. Unless the sanity hearing follows immediately after their initial appearance, a stay of execution would have to be granted it was believed.

Authorities said they would proceed with execution of Stalesky and Duschowski regardless of whether Torrez's plea was successful.

The three men presented a contrasting picture today. Stalesky and Duschowski, their faces bearing the pallor that long confinement in prison brings about, were cross and surly. Torrez faces death with a grin and a shrug of the shoulders.

"I have made my peace with God. I am ready for death," Torrez said. He was as surprised as anyone at interference of the Mexican government.

He even promised to go to the gallows singing La Paloma, the Spanish melody which he has sung and strummed on a guitar while confined in the county jail awaiting the hangman's noose. Once he played the guitar to deaden the sound of the saw as his mates attempted to free themselves from the jail.

It was just about a year ago that Klein was killed. Seven prisoners of the state penitentiary—all serving life sentences for murder—walked into his office. They struck down the warden, battered him to death and fled in the prison motor car.

One man was killed but six others were recaptured, tried and convicted of the murder. They were sentenced to hang and were brought to the county jail here. Appeals delayed the hanging.

Twice they attempted to escape. Once Torrez, Bernardo Roa and Gergorio Rizzo escaped the jail and got to Chicago where they battled with police. Roa escaped and the two others were captured and a patrolman was killed.

Just a few weeks ago the five remaining men again attempted to escape and there was a gun battle in the prison yards—only a few hundred feet from the scaffold where the men are to die. Rizzo was killed. Charles Shader escaped.

Tomorrow, just after dawn breaks over this peaceful Illinois town, the remaining three will pay their wager with death in the first triple hanging in the history of the state.

MAY MAKE 40 FOOT ROADWAY THROUGH IOWA

Kenyon, Ia., July 14.—(UP)—Discussion of proposals for making Capitol highway a 40-foot road through to Osage, Iowa, is expected at a meeting here tonight of the Capitol Highway association.

Improvements contemplated to make the highway a popular and well-maintained route through Iowa to Chicago will be discussed at the meeting.

The widened road to Osage would connect there with the new highway now under construction from Osage to Dubuque.

NORTHERN PACIFIC SPENDS HALF MILLION FOR CROP HANDLING

St. Paul, July 14.—(UP)—Northern Pacific railway executives today announced authorization of an additional expenditure of $500,000 to insure efficient handling of the 1927 farm crops in the northwest.

The plans for improvements on the lines include:

Assembly of grain cars at shipping centers in the agricultural area; construction of passing tracks at 43 points on the system at a cost of $200,000; employment of 250 additional car repairmen, and additional work on branch lines.

The steps are to be taken in view of the largest crop yield in 12 years, the Northern Pacific officials stated.

HIGH SCHOOL TEACHER HAS FLYING ASPIRATIONS

Chicago, July 14.—(UP)—Miss Mildred Doran, 22-year-old Flint, Mich., school teacher who aspires to be the first woman to fly from San Francisco to Hawaii, was to take off from Checkerboard field today for Tulsa, Okla., on the third leg of her flight from Flint to the coast.

The pretty school teacher carried a small overnight bag, some maps and a powder compact as equipment for the trip. She will act as navigator for Augey Pedlar, pilot of the Buhl biplane they will use. They are entered in the San Francisco-Honolulu race which starts Aug. 11.

Perett suffered several broken ribs.

AFTER A FALSE START, SMITH LEAVES OAKLAND

WITH HIM WAS EMORY B. BRONTE, EXPERIENCED NAVIGATOR

HOPE TO BE FIRST CIVILIANS TO FLY FROM SAN FRANCISCO TO HAWAII

Oakland Airport, San Leandro Bay, July 14.—(UP)—The civilian challenge to the once conquered Pacific airway began at 10:39 A. M. today.

After one false start, causing a return to the head of the mile and a quarter long runway, the small monoplane piloted by Ernest L. Smith made a perfect departure from the field, taking off at 10:39 A. M.

He rose slowly, ascending to about 700 feet before the silver gray wings of his plane faded from sight in the haze over San Francisco Bay.

With him was Emory B. Bronte, holder of a ship master's license.

They hope to be the first civilians to fly from San Francisco to Honolulu.

Their second hope was to lower the time in which Lieuts. Lester J. Maitland and Albert F. Hegenberger made the flight. The army fliers, first to span the distance landed in Honolulu 25 hours and 49 minutes after departure from this air field.

No ceremony attended Smith's actual take-off presumably at the flyer's request.

Nine minutes after he disappeared in the haze, his plane, "City of Oakland" was headed back toward Oakland Airport and circled the field.

He descended to an altitude of 200 feet. Bronte's head appeared through the window of his cockpit. He waved to the crowds who cheered. Five planes escorted him in his last farewell to the field—one on either side and two directly in the rear.

Winging gracefully around, the plane headed once more for the bay entrance, gaining altitude rapidly.

The pilot and his navigator smiled broadly and waved on their take-off evidently not perturbed by the ill fortune which had attended the first two attempted take-offs of the machine.

On Smith's first attempt June 28, a short time after the take-off of the army's Fokker "Bird of Paradise," he was forced to return after nine minutes to the field, due to a cracked deflector.

He had as his navigator on that attempt Captain William H. Carter.

Four homing pigeons are carried by the "City of Oakland" instead of the first two decided upon. They will be released at intervals of about 200 miles at sea.

The pigeons and a small but powerful wireless set will keep the world in knowledge of the fliers' progress.

The army radio beacon at Crissy Field and signals from steamers enroute between California and Honolulu will keep the fliers informed of their bearings.

Smith bade an affectionate farewell to Miss Marjorie Brown, his fiancee, and Ernest W Smith, his father. The elder Smith was disturbed over his son's intention to make a return flight.

"Don't do anything rash, one flight's enough," was his parting advice.

After Smith's silver winged plane had headed presumably for the sea, he swung again and headed over San Francisco, his fleet plane escort remaining in formation.

He circled the city at 11 A. M.

Fog and smelling salts combined to force delay of the take-off originally scheduled for 9 A. M.

Heavy fog hung over the bay and far out to sea until 9 A. M. At that hour the sun broke through and gave rise to hope that the start might be made soon after it had been first planned.

After entering his plane, Smith asked for two bottles of smelling salts as protection against possible sleepiness on the 2408 mile route.

A messenger was rushed by motorcycle into San Leandro while Smith and Bronte prolonged their farewells.

Bronte took along an army revolver shortly before his take-off. He said he wanted to shoot sharks.

Smith circled San Francisco twice and headed again for the Golden Gate. He was sighted immediately over the entrance at 11:08 o'clock headed for the open sea and Honolulu.

Gibson replied to Viscount Jellicoe's point.

"The American delegation," he said, "entertains very serious misgivings relative to an effort to prepare in peace for all possible contingencies of war.

"This same duty of hunting down raiders may fall on any one of our navies during the war time, but if we endeavor in time of peace to build our forces for this duty we shut the door to all possibility of naval limitation."

"COOLIDGE LUCK" STIRS ALL OF RAPID CITY

WHEN IT HAILS IN FIELDS, IT DOES NOT TOUCH "CAL" IN OPEN CAR

WHEN OTHER FISHERMEN HAVE BAD LUCK, HE HOOKS TEN TROUT

By PAUL R. MALLON
(United Press Staff Correspondent)

Rapid City, S. D., July 14.—The saying "Coolidge Luck" has become a proverb out here where the president has established his summer White House.

When it hails in the fields beside him, Mr. Coolidge in an open car is untouched; when it rains, there is no downpour near him and when other fishermen have bad luck he hooks ten trout.

The proverb has become so famous that townspeople here are using it as a by-word and say: "Let's go with President Coolidge and keep out of the rain."

The story started when sometime ago Mr. Coolidge left the executive offices shortly before hail the size of tennis balls beat down upon the town. Fear was felt for his safety. A party was organized to go out to rescue him but word was later received that he had ridden home in perfect ease and comfort and had never seen the hail.

The story of the president's immunity to misfortune is not new.

Years ago in Massachusetts Mr. Coolidge gained renown for his luck. The manner in which he was nominated as vice president and similar developments later created the phrase there that nothing could stop "Coolidge luck."

Out here his good fortune has been even better and farmers are beginning to thank him for bringing the best crops they have had in ten years. Real estate developers too are glad that he selected this place for his summer home.

Mr. Coolidge, too, is doing all it can to aid advertisement of the country. He has intimated that he would like to provide a permanent summer White House in this region and local citizens are encouraging him to promote their district.

GET TRIPLE GALLOWS READY IN ILLINOIS

200 POUND SAND BAGS USED TO TEST EQUIPMENT

3 SLAYERS OF PRISON WARDEN TO BE HANGED AT JOLIET

Joliet, Ill., July 14. — (UP)—While the boom of 200-pound sand bags used in testing the triple gallows resounded through Will county jail, officials made plans today to thwart the schemes which they believe are designed to prevent execution of three slayers of a prison warden tomorrow.

The first effort to interfere with plans for the execution was made through the courts by Mary Belle Spencer, attorney who said she represented Luis Lupian, Mexican consul for Chicago. Miss Spencer filed a petition in Will Circuit court asking a sanity hearing for Robert Torrez, one of the convicted trio.

The proceeding, which was to be heard today, is identical with the "stir crazy" plea which has kept Russell Scott, former Canadian millionaire, from the gallows for more than two years. Attorneys contend Torrez has become insane since he has been confined in jail.

The other threat of an effort to stop the execution was a report to Will county authorities that friends of Charles Ouschowski and Walter Stalesky, the other two men to die for killing Warden Peter M. Klein, planned to raid the jail and free the condemned.

Fifty special policemen were stationed in and about the jail today in addition to regular deputy sheriffs as a precautionary measure.

Attorneys declared today there is no alternative but to grant a hearing on the sanity petition. They were to appear in court today before Judge Frederick R. Hill. Unless the sanity hearing follows immediately after their initial appearance, a stay of execution would have to be granted it was believed.

Authorities said they would proceed with execution of Stalesky and Duschowski regardless of whether Torrez's plea was successful.

The three men presented a contrasting picture today. Stalesky and Duschowski, their faces bearing the pallor that long confinement in prison brings about, were cross and surly. Torrez faces death with a grin and a shrug of the shoulders.

"I have made my peace with God. I am ready for death," Torrez said. He was as surprised as anyone at interference of the Mexican government.

He even promised to go to the gallows singing La Paloma, the Spanish melody which he has sung and strummed on a guitar while confined in the county jail awaiting the hangman's noose. Once he played the guitar to deaden the sound of the saw as his mates attempted to free themselves from the jail.

It was just about a year ago that Klein was killed. Seven prisoners of the state penitentiary—all serving life sentences for murder—walked into his office. They struck down the warden, battered him to death and fled in the prison motor car.

One man was killed but six others were recaptured, tried and convicted of the murder. They were sentenced to hang and were brought to the county jail here. Appeals delayed the hanging.

Twice they attempted to escape. Once Torrez, Bernardo Roa and Gergorio Rizzo escaped the jail and got to Chicago where they battled with police. Roa escaped and the two others were captured and a patrolman was killed.

Just a few weeks ago the five remaining men again attempted to escape and there was a gun battle in the prison yards—only a few hundred feet from the scaffold where the men are to die. Rizzo was killed. Charles Shader escaped.

Tomorrow, just after dawn breaks over this peaceful Illinois town, the remaining three will pay their wager with death in the first triple hanging in the history of the state.

AFTER A FALSE START, SMITH LEAVES OAKLAND

WITH HIM WAS EMORY B. BRONTE, EXPERIENCED NAVIGATOR

HOPE TO BE FIRST CIVILIANS TO FLY FROM SAN FRANCISCO TO HAWAII

Oakland Airport, San Leandro Bay, July 14.—(UP)—The civilian challenge to the once conquered Pacific airway began at 10:39 A. M. today.

After one false start, causing a return to the head of the mile and a quarter long runway, the small monoplane piloted by Ernest L. Smith made a perfect departure from the field, taking off at 10:39 A. M.

He rose slowly, ascending to about 700 feet before the silver gray wings of his plane faded from sight in the haze over San Francisco Bay.

With him was Emory B. Bronte, holder of a ship master's license.

They hope to be the first civilians to fly from San Francisco to Honolulu.

Their second hope was to lower the time in which Lieuts. Lester J. Maitland and Albert F. Hegenberger made the flight. The army fliers, first to span the distance landed in Honolulu 25 hours and 49 minutes after departure from this air field.

No ceremony attended Smith's actual take-off presumably at the flyer's request.

Nine minutes after he disappeared in the haze, his plane, "City of Oakland" was headed back toward Oakland Airport and circled the field.

He descended to an altitude of 200 feet. Bronte's head appeared through the window of his cockpit. He waved to the crowds who cheered. Five planes escorted him in his last farewell to the field—one on either side and two directly in the rear.

Winging gracefully around, the plane headed once more for the bay entrance, gaining altitude rapidly.

The pilot and his navigator smiled broadly and waved on their take-off evidently not perturbed by the ill fortune which had attended the first two attempted take-offs of the machine.

On Smith's first attempt June 28, a short time after the take-off of the army's Fokker "Bird of Paradise," he was forced to return after nine minutes to the field, due to a cracked deflector.

He had as his navigator on that attempt Captain William H. Carter.

Four homing pigeons are carried by the 'City of Oakland" instead of the first two decided upon. They will be released at intervals of about 200 miles at sea.

The pigeons and a small but powerful wireless set will keep the world in knowledge of the fliers' progress.

The army radio beacon at Crissy Field and signals from steamers enroute between California and Honolulu will keep the fliers informed of their bearings.

Smith bade an affectionate farewell to Miss Marjorie Brown, his fiancee, and Ernest W. Smith, his father. The elder Smith was disturbed over his son's intention to make a return flight.

"Don't do anything rash, one flight's enough," was his parting advice.

After Smith's silver winged plane had headed presumably for the sea, he swung again and headed over San Francisco, his five plane escort remaining in formation.

He circled the city at 11 A. M.

Fog and smelling salts combined to force delay of the take-off originally scheduled for 9 A. M.

Heavy fog hung over the bay and far out to sea until 9 A. M. At that hour the sun broke through and gave rise to hope that the start might be made soon after it had been first planned.

After entering his plane, Smith asked for two bottles of smelling salts as protection against possible sleepiness on the 2408 mile route.

A messenger was rushed by motorcycle into San Leandro while Smith and Bronte prolonged their farewells.

Bronte took along an army revolver shortly before his take-off. He said he wanted to shoot sharks.

Smith circled San Francisco twice and headed again for the Golden Gate. He was sighted immediately over the entrance at 11:08 o'clock headed for the open sea and Honolulu.

BRAINERD 25 YEARS AGO

From the Daily Dispatch

July 14, 1902

Yesterday afternoon at the opening of the summer school in this city under the conductorship of Prof. Andrew Nelson, 82 teachers enrolled. This is about 10 or 12 more then enrolled last year on the opening date. Many more came in today and the number now exceeds 100.

A gentlemen came to the office of the Daily Dispatch this morning with a story that certainly has some yellow streak in it, but so earnest was he about the whole matter that it is worth while publishing. Thos O'Neil is authority for the statement that on Chas. Pointon's place in the country there is a nice big tomcat that served the purpose of a setting hen and went through the ordeal of setting on a dozen eggs for three weeks, hatching out 12 nice little chickie biddies. This can be taken with or without, but should be shaken well before using.

Attorneys Bannon and Heino left this afternoon for Aitkin where they went on legal business.

Mrs. J. P. Early left this afternoon for Michigan for an extended visit with relatives and friends.

St. Paul, July 14.—(UP)—Resignation of Guy C. Hanna as president of the state school for the feeble-minded at Faribault was announced here today.

LUDWIG H. LEE, NEW YORK JANITOR, INDICTED FOR MURDER

New York, July 14.—(UP)—Ludwig Halvorson Lee was indicted on two counts of first degree murder today in connection with the slaying of Miss Sarah Elizabeth Brownell and Mrs. Alfred Bennett.

He was arraigned in county court, pleaded not guilty and was held without bail.

The evidence against Lee was largely circumstantial. It had been expected most of the day would be required to present the evidence, and the early indictment came as a surprise.

THE KNOT HOLE

Vol. 2 THURSDAY, JULY 14, 1927 No. 30

Men may have their failings, but they don't kiss when they meet on the street.

"Something must be done," said the bride as she smelled the burning biscuits.

The inebriated young man rocked into the lobby of a great hotel far from his native land. He looked into a tall mirror and smiled with pleasure. "Look!" he cried. "They've got a picture of me here."

"Children," said the Sunday school superintendent, "Why are we all like flowers? What do we have that flowers have?"

"Worms!" shouted a small boy in the primary class. And the superintendent crept under the pulpit chair to hide his emotion.

Household Hint: According to a trade magazine here, the best way to get rid of bed bugs is to chase them up the spiral bed springs until they get dizzy, then suffocate them with a sock.

Mother: "Quit pulling the cat's tail."

Small Son: "I ain't pulling, it's the cat."

Now will that clever dispenser of joy,
Who gave Mother a permanent wave,
Give us a permanent bath for the boy,
And father a permanent shave?

We know about a hundred who,
Are havin' a spell o' summer flu,
Throat all sore and watery eyes,
Ain't it fierce? We sympathize.

Fortunately, the locomotive engineer has no one in his cab but the fireman, therefore, doesn't try to drive with one hand.

"If you are going fishing with the wife this summer," advises one of our newspapers, "take a hook and sinker."

We know men who crab about the way things are going here in Brainerd but boost to beat the band when they get away from home.

BRAINERD 25 YEARS AGO

From the Daily Dispatch

July 14, 1902

Yesterday afternoon at the opening of the summer school in this city under the conductorship of Prof. Andrew Nelson, 82 teachers enrolled. This is about 10 or 12 more then enrolled last year on the opening date. Many more came in today and the number now exceeds 100.

A gentlemen came to the office of the Daily Dispatch this morning with a story that certainly has some yellow streak in it, but so earnest was he about the whole matter that it is worth while publishing. Thos O'Neil is authority for the statement that on Chas. Pointon's place in the country there is a nice big tomcat that served the purpose of a setting hen and went through the ordeal of setting on a dozen eggs for three weeks, hatching out 12 nice little chickie biddies. This can be taken with or without, but should be shaken well before using.

Attorneys Bannon and Heino left this afternoon for Aitkin where they went on legal business.

Mrs. J. P. Early left this afternoon for Michigan for an extended visit with relatives and friends.

GUY C. HANNA RESIGNS AS HEAD STATE INSTITUTION

St. Paul, July 14.—(UP)—Resignation of Guy C. Hanna as president of the state school for the feeble-minded at Faribault was announced here today.

Hanna, who has been head of the school since June 1, 1917, will relinquish his duties as soon as a successor is named by the state board of control.

LUDWIG H. LEE, NEW YORK JANITOR, INDICTED FOR MURDER

New York, July 14.—(UP)—Ludwig Halvorson Lee was indicted on two counts of first degree murder today in connection with the slaying of Miss Sarah Elizabeth Brownell and Mrs. Alfred Bennett.

He was arraigned in county court, pleaded not guilty and was held without bail.

The evidence against Lee was largely circumstantial. It had been expected most of the day would be required to present the evidence, and the early indictment came as a surprise.

Duluth to Entertain 1,000 of Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers

Duluth, Minn., July 4.—(UP)—Preparations were being completed today for entertainment of more than 1,000 members of five Minneapolis lodges of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers who will visit Duluth Sunday. They will come here on two special Soo Line trains.

Senator Reed Seeks to Impound All Pennsylvania Ballots

Washington, July 14.—(UP)—Senator David Reed, republican, Pennsylvania, announced today he had asked the senate privileges and elections committee to impound all Pennsylvania ballots in the 1926 Vare-Wilson senatorial election. THE KNOT HOLE

Vol. 2 THURSDAY, JULY 14, 1927 No. 30

Men may have their failings, but they don't kiss when they meet on the street.

"Something must be done," said the bride as she smelled the burning biscuits.

The inebriated young man rocked into the lobby of a great hotel far from his native land. He looked into a tall mirror and smiled with pleasure. "Look!" he cried. "They've got a picture of me here."

"Children," said the Sunday school superintendent, "Why are we all like flowers? What do we have that flowers have?"

"Worms!" shouted a small boy in the primary class. And the superintendent crept under the pulpit chair to hide his emotion.

Household Hint: According to a trade magazine here, the best way to get rid of bed bugs is to chase them up the spiral bed springs until they get dizzy, then suffocate them with a sock.

Mother: "Quit pulling the cat's tail."

Small Son: "I ain't pulling, it's the cat."

Now will that clever dispenser of joy,
Who gave Mother a permanent wave,
Give us a permanent bath for the boy,
And father a permanent shave?

We know about a hundred who,
Are havin' a spell o' summer flu,
Throat all sore and watery eyes,
Ain't it fierce? We sympathize.

Fortunately, the locomotive engineer has no one in his cab but the fireman, therefore, doesn't try to drive with one hand.

"If you are going fishing with the wife this summer," advises one of our newspapers, "take a hook and sinker."

We know men who crab about the way things are going here in Brainerd but boost to beat the band when they get away from home.

Danny and the Chickens

By MARTHA M. WILLIAMS

(Copyright.)

A RICH bachelor who has come to forty years is assuredly entitled to his hobbies, especially if they are harmless. The Major's hobby was not merely cock fighting but whatever had to do with producing cocks of the first water. He would neither waste time nor risk money upon birds otherwise evolved. His entries always ruled favorites. Naturally the strain was precious.

So much by way of prologue. After it one will understand, easily, the Major's rage, heart-break and murder-lust when in mid-May a marauding dog plundered three broody mothers, sucked every egg, then added insult to injury by frisking up to the empty piazza, the very moral and pattern of happy repletion.

A strange dog, evidently ownerless, friendless. The Major already knew his guilt—and came like a besom of destruction, gun in hand, in a rage so black he could barely see. The culprit rose and held up a placating paw, quite as became a gentleman dog intruding upon strangers. The Major raised his gun. Instantly the dog sprang to heel, and stood like a statue, except for the quiver at the very tip of his tail. The Major fell back a step, amazed, then shouted loudly: "You Phil! Come take this thief and hang him—higher than Haman. Thieves shouldn't die the death of gentlemen—"

"You're right! Indeed they shouldn't," a girl's voice panted painfully from the side gate. "But who says my Danny is a thief? I wouldn't believe it."

"You have to believe it. Come and see. But who are you, and how came you here?" the Major demanded.

"I—I'm Nora Darcy, just come from Ireland, looking for my Uncle Tim Darcy. The car broke down a piece back—Danny slipped away from me while I waited for the fixing. But kill him! You can't. Not till you kill me."

"I tell you he's a murderer no less a thief, twenty chickens at least—and maybe a world beater or so in the broods—"

"Danny! Danny! I can't believe it of you. And you broke of sucking eggs when you were just three months old!" Nora cried catching the dog tight in her arms. In a wink she lifted a face, white, tearless, infinitely grieved, saying steadily to the Major: "Please, sir—I ought not to ask it—but—but—" swallowing hard—"if you'll—have mercy—we'll go straight back to Ireland—at home I don't think he could be so bad."

"No need of that," the Major said gruffly. "Take him—and never let me see him again. But let him rifle another nest, and nothing can save him."

"Thank you," Nora said very low, then with a piteous shake: "I'm to blame—taking off his collar made him so happy he lost his sense." Then stooping she took tender hold of a silky ear. But Danny marched straight to the Major again, lifting a placating paw. "He—he wants to be friends—please, please don't think he is all bad—"

"'Deed he ain't, Missy," black Phil interposed. "Once de collar was off he dest had ter follow his nose—hit tole him chicken—an' chicken he found. Ef he wus mine, no money wouldn't buy him. Wid him head ob our kennels we'd win all de field trials an' champeen ribbins anybody mought hang up—"

"Think so, Phil?" the Major asked almost under breath.

Phil nodded: "I ain't thinkin'—I knows."

Inside a week Phil came to Nora's Uncle Tim Darcy's to talk business, large and serious. Nora had been so fearful, so watchful that she began to look worn and wan. She, of course, was spared the details—only the result mattered. That was the transfer of Danny under six months' lease to become the head of the Robinhood Kennels—which ranked next his fighting cocks in the Major's affections.

Danny made himself free of the Darcy house, and in return took all the Darcy household to the Major's to inspect several specially fine broods brought off safely at exactly the right time; that is to say, mid-June when grass is tenderest, insects and worms plentiest and fattest, and the waxing sun most vital. They made a fine show on the clipped velvet of the lawn these young creatures. Madame Silver-Spangle marshaled the parade. This was her third season—the fact bespoke her a mother incomparable.

"How much is she worth, Major?" Uncle Tim asked, his eyes twinkling.

"What is any perfect mother worth?" the Major flung back at him, his eyes the while fast on Nora. Then came Phil with Danny on leash, in the pink of condition, and rapturous at sight of Nora, yet offering his paw to the Major who joined it with Nora's in his warm clasp, and said: "Don't you think she belongs here, Danny? Let's keep her always—"

Quite as though he understood Danny leaped up, put his paws around the neck of his mistress, and said in his best dog Latin: "Bow-wow—yes."

Youth and Age

"Youth," says H. G. Wells, "is reactionary." If he is right, there is not much chance for the progressives for middle age and old age are almost always conservative and often "reactionary."

WOMEN'S FIRST

They were playing in a mixed foursome and Percy Plunkett was very much off color. It annoyed him because he wanted to put up a "show" before the girl of his heart.

After a particularly bad miss he felt compelled to indulge in a mild expletive.

"Sorry, Susie," he apologized to the girl. "I didn't mean to say that. Forgive me for swearing like that before you."

"That's all right," returned the maiden sweetly, "you didn't."

Preferred Risk

Agent—Do you own a car?

Prospective Insurer—Oh, I suppose you're going to stick on the premium because I'm a motorist.

Agent—On the contrary, the premium will be less. If you drive a car you are in less danger of being run over by one.

SO HE WOULD KNOW

"Why do you pay such attention to what that crank tells you to do?"

"So I'll know what not to do."

The Perfect Guest

We love the guest who finds our home
A pleasant place to stay,
And yet who knows without a hint
The time to go away.

Also Water Hazards

"Golf is a very old game, isn't it, dad?"

"Yes, my son."

"They played golf in the ark, didn't they, dad?"

"What are you talking about?"

"Why, they had lynx in the ark, didn't they, dad?"—Stray Stories.

Musical Menu

Cook—What are we havin' tonight, ma'am?

Mistress—Why, I just told you; clear soup, filet of sole, the roast and pudding.

Cook—I meant on the radio, ma'am. —Boston Transcript.

Out of Her Line

Mrs. Nuwed—Mary, I think we'll have boiled mutton with caper sauce for dinner. Are there any capers in the house?

Mary—No, ma'am.

Mrs. Nuwed—Then go into the garden and cut some.

What's Time to a Car?

Helen—Have you ever timed your car?

Grace—Yes, indeed. It stood perfectly still for an hour and three minutes on the road today.

WOMEN'S RIGHTS

She—Women's rights are growing stronger every day.

He—Yes, newspaper accounts of hubbies being beaten up by their wives are increasing without doubt.

Too True!

Mary had a little hen
But she was very queer;
She laid like fun when eggs were cheap
But stopped when they were dear.

Mystery

Mr. Newlywed—What are these things, dearie?

His Bride—Biscuits, but they don't taste right, somehow. I fried them for a full half hour, too.

Poor Girl

George—Yes, I think I can make your daughter happy, sir.

Her Father—Well, you'll have to do different. She weeps and wails over every letter you send her.

The Feline Breed

Mae—Just think. A strange man tried to kiss me.

Tess—Hm. He must have been strange, dear.

Come Across

Tramp—Oh, I feel funny inside!

Ted—What did you eat?

Tramp—Nothing. Maybe that's why.

Bebe Daniels and William Powell in the Clarence Badger Production, 'Senorita' A Paramount Picture

Bebe Daniels proclaims that her current Paramount vehicle, "Senorita," which is showing at the Lyceum tonight and Friday is the most exciting picture she has ever made. Throughout most of the story Miss Daniels masquerades as a boy and gets into all kinds of thrilling situations out of which she extricates herself through sheer nerve and quick thinking.

"Youth," says H. G. Wells, "is reactionary." If he is right, there is not much chance for the progressives for middle age and old age are almost always conservative and often "reactionary."

WOMEN'S FIRST

They were playing in a mixed foursome and Percy Plunkett was very much off color. It annoyed him because he wanted to put up a "show" before the girl of his heart.

After a particularly bad miss he felt compelled to indulge in a mild expletive.

"Sorry, Susie," he apologized to the girl. "I didn't mean to say that. Forgive me for swearing like that before you."

"That's all right," returned the maiden sweetly, "you didn't."

Preferred Risk

Agent—Do you own a car?

Prospective Insurer—Oh, I suppose you're going to stick on the premium because I'm a motorist.

Agent—On the contrary, the premium will be less. If you drive a car you are in less danger of being run over by one.

SO HE WOULD KNOW

"Why do you pay such attention to what that crank tells you to do?"

"So I'll know what not to do."

The Perfect Guest

We love the guest who finds our home
A pleasant place to stay,
And yet who knows without a hint
The time to go away.

Also Water Hazards

"Golf is a very old game, isn't it, dad?"

"Yes, my son."

"They played golf in the ark, didn't they, dad?"

"What are you talking about?"

"Why, they had lynx in the ark, didn't they, dad?"—Stray Stories.

Musical Menu

Cook—What are we havin' tonight, ma'am?

Mistress—Why, I just told you; clear soup, filet of sole, the roast and pudding.

Cook—I meant on the radio, ma'am. —Boston Transcript.

Out of Her Line

Mrs. Nuwed—Mary, I think we'll have boiled mutton with caper sauce for dinner. Are there any capers in the house?

Mary—No, ma'am.

Mrs. Nuwed—Then go into the garden and cut some.

What's Time to a Car?

Helen—Have you ever timed your car?

Grace—Yes, indeed. It stood perfectly still for an hour and three minutes on the road today.

WOMEN'S RIGHTS

She—Women's rights are growing stronger every day.

He—Yes, newspaper accounts of hubbies being beaten up by their wives are increasing without doubt.

Too True!

Mary had a little hen
But she was very queer;
She laid like fun when eggs were cheap
But stopped when they were dear.

Mystery

Mr. Newlywed—What are these things, dearie?

His Bride—Biscuits, but they don't taste right, somehow. I fried them for a full half hour, too.

Poor Girl

George—Yes, I think I can make your daughter happy, sir.

Her Father—Well, you'll have to do different. She weeps and wails over every letter you send her.

The Feline Breed

Mae—Just think. A strange man tried to kiss me.

Tess—Hm. He must have been strange, dear.

Come Across

Tramp—Oh, I feel funny inside!

Ted—What did you eat?

Tramp—Nothing. Maybe that's why.

SAILORS ON THE GREAT LAKES

UNDER the caption "Books for Sailors" from the Cairo, Ill., "Bulletin," we read:

"People in parts of the country where there is still an idea that the Great Lakes are merely overgrown ponds and that the movements for better Great Lakes-St. Lawrence and Great Lakes-to-the-Gulf navigation are merely tempests in teapots, will be surprised to learn that 10,000 books are being collected for the use of sailors on the Great Lakes this summer. One city already has 3,000 in the basement of its public library, waiting to go out, with branch libraries and other depositing stations yet to be heard from. Novels? Yes. But history, philosophy, science, school textbooks, too.

"Do the sailors read the books? They do. They eat 'em alive. They read one book right after another. Often they read the same books twice.

"There are many sailormen on the big sweet water, and they are an up-and-coming set of men."

Let us add that Lake Erie is the busiest body of water of its size in the world, that the "Soo" locks handle approximately twice as much annual commerce as the Suez and Panama combined, and that as a port Duluth-Superior is exceeded on this continent only by New York—and the reason why there are sailors on the Great Lakes begins to stand out. They are the carriers of a nation's business—business that is seeking a water outlet to the ocean.

FREE INSURANCE? WHO PAYS?

THE Industrial News Bureau, The Manufacturer reveals a new angle in the matter of compulsory liability insurance as carried by car owners of Massachusetts.

Though Massachusetts compels all automobile owners to carry liability insurance, this insurance cannot be given away free by the insurance companies. It is reported that in that state cancellations of automobile liability policies by insurance companies are coming into the office of the registrar of motor vehicles at the rate of several hundred a day.

Under the law, every motorist in the state had to take out liability insurance on January 1st before he could get his registration plates. Many paid cash down, many did not. The insurance companies were compelled by the law to insure everyone who came along. But with the passing of a 45-day credit limit the companies began to send out second notices for the money and when no money was forthcoming, notices of cancellation went to the registrar of motor vehicles.

Of course, this will result in one of the desired effects from compulsory insurance laws—to keep financially irresponsible motorists off the highways. But what of the insurance companies? They have had the expense of writing the business and have carried it for 45 days with no compensation.

It would seem that this one point would inevitably raise rates.

WHY WORRY?

WHAT worries you most in life? Generally we buck up and face our big problems squarely. Our attitude is, "I'll do the best I can. It won't do any good to worry about it." Then we turn around and worry about a trifling incident or situation.

Worry is a psychopathic condition, an emotional disease. Sometimes it is caused by unconscious vanity—an exaggerated conception of the importance of ourselves and our surroundings.

Now that the medical profession is beginning to understand the endocrine glands of the body, a peculiar cause of worry is discovered. This type of worry sometimes takes the form of a constant apprehension of impending disaster, a fear of nothing in particular, caused by over-secretion of certain chemicals by the thyroid and adrenal glands.

Usually, though, worry is a mental disorder, a sort of escape of steam or leak from the disordered nervous system.

The best medicine is work and a hobby interesting enough to take the patient's mind off his worry and make him forget it. The worry may come back as soon as the work and play are halted. But generally the brain can be trained to forget, just the same as it can be trained to remember.

The moment you find yourself worrying, strike to dismiss the subject from your mind. Wipe it away, like chalk writing from a blackboard, and concentrate the mind on something else.

Above all, remember that worry is nine-tenths in the imagination.—Bemidji Daily Pioneer.

What Every Girl Should Know

by GISA PRUCHONE.

Copyright, 1927, Warner Bros. Pictures, Inc.

"WHAT EVERY GIRL SHOULD KNOW," with Patsy Ruth Miller, is a Warner Bros. picturization of this novel.

SYNOPSIS

Mary Sullivan—slender, beautiful, red-headed—is the meteor of the Garden City tennis tournament. A poetical, queerly spiritual girl is Mary, despite her physical prowess. She has grown up with tennis balls. Her mother died sewing them for a living, that Mary might be a lady. Her spirit lives on in Mary. Mary becomes acquainted with Wally Mason, a young reporter. Wally and Mary find they have much in common. Mary keeps house for her brothers, David and Robert. David, the family support, hopes Mary will get safely married; but Mary disbelieves in love.

CHAPTER II.—Continued

The gnats trembled and drifted and shimmered in the heat of the sun and formed a hazy web, and Mary in imagination sailed through them into the future atop one of the high places. Delightful sailing. She wore wings and darted through the gnats beneath the chestnut tree, and the mist of her thoughts, straight to the high places. She sang, "I am sailing, sailing, and my wings are tipped with gold, and so are the tips of my shoes, and the air is cool with blue that kisses my face as I am wafted through it. I am very beautiful. I am heavenly. I am celestial." It was indeed one of her celestial moments, when she was tied down to the earth by the silken fragility of a hair. "I am happy I am I," she murmured. "I am happy I am I, because of the delight of being alive. Would I be happy if I were someone else, for I would still be alive then, undoubtedly. But no—I wouldn't possess the things I do now. I would be a different being. I would feel differently. I wouldn't be I!" She relished it, little egotist. Rolled the morsel about under her tongue. "I!"

"Will you come for a ride with me?"

She felt her being surcharged to the very outposts of her body. "This is being alive," said Mary.

Thus she sat, and soon a faint breeze moistened her cheeks with its coolness touched with mist, and breathed over her eyelids where she closed them. Unaccountably, there sprang before her vision the picture of the tall young man with the eager eyes, and the laugh that burst forth so frequently as his head went back. A very charming young man, thought Mary. Rather delightful. Fresh! Yet with a certain moodiness that lay hidden in the region beyond those eyes when they forgot to be eager. The moodiness intrigued her, rather. As did mention of Rupert Brooke. Poetry. Poetry was made in the high places for the people who walked there. The young man's name was—what was it? She opened her eyes wide to think, and saw instead the tall young man, comfortably ensconsed on the topmost step, with his head, too, against the pillar, and a long blade of grass between his lips.

Mary blinked rapidly to betoken her surprise, while she smiled her welcome.

"Careful," said Wally, "you'll tangle your laches."

"How—"

"—did I get here?" he finished for her. "Tell me it really doesn't matter. Tell me that nothing matters, but the fact that I am really here."

Mary laughed. "When I tell you what it is really essential that I do tell you, I am afraid you will no longer be here!"

Wally was hurt. "You don't think I'd really go, even if you told me to, do you, Elaine?" He was playing again with the Arthurian name. "I've longed for this afternoon. Pined for it during the chaos of this last week. Chaos, Miss Sullivan, because of you."

Mary looked straight into his eyes. A charming young man, and forsooth, fresh indeed.

She said, "Nevertheless, I shall tell it to you. It's painful," and cocked her head to one side while regarding the effect of this upon him.

"Lay on, Macduff," he commanded, and there was a little hurt in the region beyond his eyes—that region of moodiness

"I really am ashamed," said Mary, and looked contrite. "I am—but—I've forgotten your name, and it's stupid of me!"

"It is stupid," agreed Wally. "Stupid because it involves the added trouble of listening to it once more, and remembering it. Because it will have to be remembered, Elaine, I intend to be about a good deal, you see, to talk to you, and with you, and to listen to you laugh, and watch that eddy in your eyes when you do, and be around when you've need for succor——"

"That is the need of a damsel in distress, and I—I shall never be in distress!"

"That statement belies the femininity of your entire sweet person, Elaine. Haven't you yet discovered, though, that need of it or not, it's an extremely wise thing to feign a need? Nothing so speeds the reluctant male toward his lady fair, granting the male's reluctance."

"I am to take it then, that this male has no need of the comehither?"

"None whatever, Elaine. So there's no need of feigning. Will you come for a ride with me?" Wally pointed the car out, a bit up the street, its greenness mingling with that of the hedge that hid its solid bulk from view. "No, no!" he assured Mary, "Not yet, it isn't. Some day, perhaps. No—some day, undoubtedly. You see, Elaine, I have that doggedness, that determination to get there! that should be the aim of every young man of the present day. I can guarantee, Elaine, I can guarantee, Success. I, too, will be a big man some day. Meanwhile I am studying French in ten lessons in order to fill the desk of my big boss when he assumes the presidency of the Consolidated Oil." He laughed at her sober face, and took her chin in his hand. "Isn't that a lot of hot air, thomas, Elaine? All this tosh concerning success, and that rot. Couldn't you be happy, sweet, with a volume of poems, and the wide earth to walk in, and a fireside on the days when the rain's washing the earth?" For a moment their eyes held, and then Mary shook her head, and lifted it a bit to release her chin from his hand.

"I'm sorry," he said, and smiled at her. "I can never truly grasp convention, you see, Elaine. Now I know full well that model young men do not grasp the chins of young ladies upon the second time of their meeting while they ask same to share books of poetry and fire-sides. Do they, Sober-sides?"

"Model young men don't" said Mary, "but then, who wants to be a model young man?"

"Indeed not Elaine," Wally assured her. "I can imagine no more calamitous occurrence than your changing into a model young man," whereat they both laughed, and Mary went into the house to powder the nose that Wally assured her had really no need of it.

He drove well, with an easiness and strength which she envied. "You do it so beautifully," she told him as she watched his long fingers on the wheel of the green car, low and smoothly gliding. "Do I do it as well as you play tennis, Elaine?" he asked. The car slid through the long, sun-baked streets and made for the open, while the sun, pouring through the leaves of the trees flickered and danced on the long gleaming nose of the roadster. He glanced occasionally at the profile of the girl beside him, her head tilted to catch the breeze that whipped her hair across her nose and away from her forehead, madly. Finally, she imprisoned her hair in her hands as she held them close to her cheeks, and Wally laughed, and gave the car more gas. Out into the country they sped, the breeze growing more and more gay as they left the sidewalks behind them. Yellow and green fields flirted into view with the curtsies of great court ladies as they gracefully dipped from sight. Up hills and down vales, with the purr of the motor always with them and the song of the wind as it danced past the nose of the little car.

"This," laughed Wally exultantly, "is glorious!" He threw his head back against the onrushing wind, and promptly received a cinder in his eye which felt as though a rock had been thrown at him, he said. It necessitated stopping the car alongside a crumbling stone hedge, and Mary's getting busy with his handkerchief. "I can't," she wailed. "I'm not much good at anything!" and sat back to regard him mournfully, with the handkerchief twisted to a point, and Wally's eye growing more and more [illegible]. "It's swimming!" she cried as very nearly wept, while Wally laughed. "Is it as beautiful as [illegible] eyes, when they swim and are misty, oh, Elaine?" Wally finally managed the extraction of the irritating speck of dust, and held it on his forefinger for Mary to flick off, and the ride was continued with unabated merriment. "Funny thing, life!" said Wally. "You sail along, sweet, all happiness and joy, and supreme content, eager for the next stopping place, then—bang!"

A very charming young man, thought Mary. Rather delightful. Fresh! Yet with a certain moodiness that lay hidden in the region beyond those eyes when they forgot to be eager. The moodiness intrigued her, rather. As did mention of Rupert Brooke. Poetry. Poetry was made in the high places for the people who walked there. The young man's name was—what was it? She opened her eyes wide to think, and saw instead the tall young man, comfortably ensconsed on the topmost step, with his head, too, against the pillar, and a long blade of grase between his lips.

Mary blinked rapidly to betoken her surprise, while she smiled her welcome.

"Careful," said Wally, "you'll tangle your lashes."

"How—"

"—did I get here?" he finished for her. "Tell me it really doesn't matter. Tell me that nothing matters, but the fact that I am really here."

Mary laughed. "When I tell you what it is really essential that I do tell you, I am afraid you will no longer be here!"

Wally was hurt. "You don't think I'd really go, even if you told me to, do you, Elaine?" He was playing again with the Arthurian name. "I've longed for this afternoon. Pined for it during the chaos of this last week. Chaos, Miss Sullivan, because of you."

Mary looked straight into his eyes. A charming young man, and forsooth, fresh indeed.

She said, "Nevertheless, I shall tell it to you. It's painful," and cocked her head to one side while regarding the effect of this upon him.

"Lay on, Macduff," he commanded, and there was a little hurt in the region beyond his eyes—that region of moodiness

"I really am ashamed," said Mary, and looked contrite. "I am—but—I've forgotten your name, and it's stupid of me!"

"It is stupid," agreed Wally. "Stupid because it involves the added trouble of listening to it once more, and remembering it. Because it will have to be remembered, Elaine. I intend to be about a good deal, you see, to talk to you, and with you, and to listen to you laugh, and watch that eddy in your eyes when you do, and be around when you've need for succor——"

"That is the need of a damsel in distress, and I—I shall never be in distress!"

"That statement belies the femininity of your entire sweet person, Elaine. Haven't you yet discovered, though, that need of it or not, it's an extremely wise thing to feign a need? Nothing so speeds the reluctant male toward his lady fair, granting the male's reluctance."

"I am to take it then, that this male has no need of the come-hither?"

"None whatever, Elaine. So there's no need of feigning. Will you come for a ride with me?" Wally pointed the car out, a bit up the street, its greenness mingling with that of the hedge that hid its solid bulk from view. "No, no!" he assured Mary, "Not yet, it isn't. Some day, perhaps. No—some day, undoubtedly. You see, Elaine, I have that doggedness, that determination to get there! that should be the aim of every young man of the present day. I can guarantee, Elaine. I can guarantee, Success. I, too, will be a big man some day. Meanwhile I am studying French in ten lessons in order to fill the desk of my big boss when he assumes the presidency of the Consolidated Oil." He laughed at her sober face, and took her chin in his hand. "Isn't that a lot of hot air, though, Elaine? All this tosh concerning success, and that rot. Couldn't you be happy, sweet, with a volume of poems, and the wide earth to walk in, and a fireside on the days when the rain's washing the earth?" For a moment their eyes held, and then Mary shook her head, and lifted it a bit to release her chin from his hand.

"I'm sorry," he said, and smiled at her. "I can never truly grasp convention, you see, Elaine. Now I know full well that model young men do not grasp the chins of young ladies upon the second time of their meeting while they ask same to share books of poetry and fire-sides. Do they, Sober-sides?"

"Model young men don't" said Mary, "but then, who wants to be a model young man?"

"Indeed not Elaine," Wally assured her. "I can imagine no more calamitous occurrence than your changing into a model young man,' whereat they both laughed, and Mary went into the house to powder the nose that Wally assured her had really no need of it.

He drove well, with an easiness and strength which she envied. "You do it so beautifully," she told him as she watched his long fingers on the wheel of the green car, low and smoothly gliding. "Do I do it as well as you play tennis, Elaine?" he asked. The car slid through the long, sun-baked streets and made for the open, while the sun, pouring through the leaves of the trees flickered and danced on the long gleaming nose of the roadster. He glanced occasionally at the profile of the girl beside him, her head tilted to catch the breeze that whipped her hair across her nose and away from her forehead, madly. Finally, she imprisoned her hair in her hands as she held them close to her cheeks, and Wally laughed, and gave the car more gas. Out into the country they sped, the breeze growing more and more gay as they left the sidewalks behind them. Yellow and green fields flirted into view with the curtsies of great court ladies as they gracefully dipped from sight. Up hills and down vales, with the purr of the motor always with them and the song of the wind as it danced past the nose of the little car.

"This," laughed Wally exultantly, "is glorious!" He threw his head back against the onrushing wind, and promptly received a cinder in his eye which felt as though a rock had been thrown at him, he said. It necessitated stopping the car alongside a crumbling stone hedge, and Mary's getting busy with his handkerchief. "I can't," she wailed. "I'm not much good at anything!" and sat back to regard him mournfully, with the handkerchief twisted to a point, and Wally's eye growing more and more [illegible]. "It's swimming!" she cried as very nearly wept, while Wally laughed. "Is it as beautiful as [illegible] eyes, when they swim and are misty, oh, Elaine?" Wally finally managed the extraction of the irritating speck of dust, and held it on his forefinger for Mary to flick off, and the ride was continued with unabated merriment. "Funny thing, life!" said Wally. "You sail along, sweet, all happiness and joy and supreme content, eager for the next stopping place, then—bang!"

SHARKEY WANTED 15 ROUND FIGHT CARD

DEMPSEY ON OTHER HAND SOUGHT TEN

FORMER CHAMPION HAD LOGICAL REASONS FOR SHORT FIGHT

SHARKEY IS NOTED AS A SLOW STARTER, SHOWED IT WITH McTIGUE

By HENRY L. FARRELL
(United Press Staff Correspondent)

New York, July 14. — When Tex Rickard was negotiating for the Dempsey-Sharkey fight, Dempsey wanted ten rounds as the limit but Sharkey held out for fifteen and got it.

After his sad exhibition against Gene Tunney in Philadelphia, in which Dempsey admitted he could not have left his stool for the eleventh round if he had to answer a call, the former champion had logical reasons for preferring a ten round fight.

He would not admit, however, that he had any doubt about his ability to last more than ten rounds against Sharkey and his argument with Rickard was that the fight ought to be won in les than ten rounds.

Sharkey found a reason for demanding a fifteen round fight in his fight with Mike McTigue. He is noted as a slow starter and his work in the early rounds against the veteran McTigue was so poor that Mike would have won the decision if the fight had ended with the tenth round.

Ring sharks, however, saw in his demand for fifteen rounds against Dempsey not a confession of his slow starting traits but a tip off on the style of fight he had decided to use against Dempsey.

They thought—and still think—that it would be wise strategy for Sharkey to box Dempsey in the early rounds and let the former champion wing himself out for five or six rounds. Sharkey has shown ability in other fights to box well enough to keep Dempsey working himself out.

In his public workouts so far, however, Sharkey has paid almost no attention to boxing or foot work and the impression is growing that his confidence has increased to the point where he wants to go out and slug with Dempsey. There is no doubt that a victory over Dempsey would be more to his credit if he went out and beat the former champion at his own game.

Gene Tunney, in failing to stop Dempsey, has not been accepted with the recognition that should be granted to a heavyweight champion and Sharkey would be the most respected fighter in the class if he took Dempsey in a round or two by trading socks with him. And some of the Sharkey money is getting concerned over the hunch that Sharkey will try to do it.

It may be that in the careless way he is leaving himself open with a guard hanging around the waist line and a reckless two handed offense, Sharkey is fooling the public. Perhaps he is doing some work in private but if he is doing more work than he is doing for the fifty cent customers he has a capacity for work and endurance that would try a truck horse.

MARATHON WALKER BOSTON TO NEW YORK ON NON-SLEEP HIKE

Boston, July 14—(UP)—William H. (Joe) Busch, 21-year-old marathon walker, of Charlestown, this morning was hiking light footed way to New York, after a perfect takeoff at Boston city hall in his running shirt "Spirit of Charlestown."

Just what Busch expects to accomplish by the non-sleep walk is a mystery. He said last night however that he intended to make the distance of over 250 miles in 48 to 55 hours.

He will not stop for sleep, he said, but arrangements have been made for beef tea and other light stimulants at large cities enroute.

Busch carried no sandwiches. He carries with him a letter from Mayor Malcolm E. Nichols of Boston to Mayor Jimmie Walker of New York, who, it was said, will greet the argonaut upon his arrival in Times square.

Among those who were at city hall to bid Busch god-speed was Dan O'Leary, 88-year-old veteran hiker.

Northeast won the final game of the first half of the Brainerd Baseball League last evening by the score of 6 to 1 from the South Side. The game, however, was played under protest after the fifth inning by the South Side which claimed that Richmond, the new N. E. pitcher, was not eligible to play in that he is not a Brainerd resident.

The matter will be threshed out by the board of directors at their next meeting. Until that time the game will not be allowed.

Richmond, the object of the dispute, pitched a fine game, striking out eight men and allowing only two hits. Only five men reached first base.

Avery started the game for the South Side but lasted only two innings as five runs and six hits were secured off him. He was replaced by Fitzharris for the next four innings who allowed only two hits and one run.

Northeast team as a whole gave Richmond good support. The team gathered a total of eight hits.

LEFTY GROVES HITS WELL

SMASHED TWO HITS, DRIVING IN THREE RUNS

FINAL SCORE WAS PHILADELPHIA 7, CHICAGO 5

LEFTY ALSO PITCHED A GOOD GAME YESTERDAY

(By United Press)

Yesterday's hero — Lefty Grove, Athletics' pitcher, contributed two hits which drove in three runs in yesterday's game with the White Sox, which was only one run more than was needed to win the game. The score was Philadelphia 7; Chicago 5. Grove gave the Sox a three run lead, but his team mates tied the score in the fifth. Lefty put the Athletics ahead by driving in a run in the sixth and was responsible for two of his team's three runs scored in the following inning.

The Cubs increased their league lead slightly by splitting a doubleheader with Boston. Carlson started for the Cubs in the first game and pitched badly. Jones, who relieved him, was little better. The Braves got 18 hits and the score was 6 to 3. Root outpitched R. Smith in a well-played second game and the score was 4 to 1 in favor of the Cubs.

The up-and-coming Tigers damaged Washington's hold on second place in the American League considerably when they won two games, 7-3 and 13-9. Harry Heilman, Tiger right fielder, got five hits in five times at bat in the second game and hit a single and a home run in the first contest. In the second game, Washington led, 7 to 3 when the Tigers went to bat in the fourth. Detroit couldn't tie the score until the seventh. They scored four in that inning, however, and two in the eighth to win very comfortably.

George Sisler of the Browns batted 1.000 for the second successive day by turning in four hits in four times at bat in yesterday's game with the Red Sox. Miller, St. Louis first baseman, also got four of the team's 18 hits in four "AB's." The score: St. Louis 14; Boston 2.

Ruth's double and Lazzeri's triple in the eighth accounted for three of the Yankee's runs and made it possible for the team to win, 5 to 3, over Cleveland. Ruth had a perfect batting average for the day with three singles in addition to the double.

Cuyler let Partridge's single to center get away from him in the eleventh inning of the Pirates-Brooklyn game and the Robins' second baseman raced home with the winning run. The Pirates made one in the fourth and Brooklyn tied it in the ninth, the final score being Brooklyn 2, Pittsburgh 1.

Cincinnati got 19 hits from three Giant pitchers to win 11 to 3 and give the New Yorkers' chances of catching up with the National league leaders another set-back.

After the score had been tied for six innings, the Cards took advantage of Decatur's wildness in the [illegible] and scored two runs on the Phils to win, 7 to 5. Decatur walked one man and hit another. Two sacrifices and a single by Toporcer brought in the runs that won the game.

Milwaukee, Wis. — Toledo and Milwaukee split a double bill here, Toledo taking the opener, 9 to 4, and Milwaukee winning 8 to 5. Pfeffer was effective on the slab in the first game but poor playing by Lear lost the game to the Toledo Hens. Johnson and Milstead were both relieved in the second game and the Brewers won.

St. Paul, Minn.—St. Paul made it six victories in a row here, defeating the Louisville Colonels, 8 to 2. Heimach was hit for five safeties although effective fielding assisted him to win.

Minneapolis, Minn.—Jim Middleton, pitching for the Minneapolis Millers allowed only five scattered hits and Minneapolis took the third of five games from Indianapolis. Duncan hit a homer in the second frame with none on.

BOBBY JONES RETAINS LEAD FOR CHAMPIONSHIP

TURNS IN CARD OF 72 FOR THE 18 HOLES PLAYED TODAY

PUTS HIM TWO STROKES AHEAD OF B. HODSON, WELSH CHAMPION

St. Andrews, Scotland, July 14.—Bobby Jones retained the lead in the second round of the British Open Golf Championship today.

After a disheartening outward nine of 37 strokes, the defending title holder recovered for a 35 on the homeward nine and his 36-hole aggregate of 140 put him two strokes ahead of B. Hodson, young Welsh champion.

The gallery, numbering at least 5,000, saw Bobby exhibiting the same brilliant golf that gave him a 68 on the first round yesterday. His putts were going down and his approach shots were finding the green almost invariably.

Hodson's rise robbed the Atlantan of some of his glory.

The 20-year-old Tenday club player had 32 on the turn—Jones' score of yesterday—and 70 for the round. It might easily have been a 69 but a little girl got in the way on the 12th hole and spoiled his drive.

LEFTY GROVES HITS WELL

SMASHED TWO HITS, DRIVING IN THREE RUNS

FINAL SCORE WAS PHILADELPHIA 7, CHICAGO 5

LEFTY ALSO PITCHED A GOOD GAME YESTERDAY

(By United Press)

Yesterday's hero — Lefty Grove, Athletics' pitcher, contributed two hits which drove in three runs in yesterday's game with the White Sox, which was only one run more than was needed to win the game. The score was Philadelphia 7; Chicago 5. Grove gave the Sox a three run lead, but his team mates tied the score in the fifth. Lefty put the Athletics ahead by driving in a run in the sixth and was responsible for two of his team's three runs scored in the following inning.

The Cubs increased their league lead slightly by splitting a doubleheader with Boston. Carlson started for the Cubs in the first game and pitched badly. Jones, who relieved him, was little better. The Braves got 18 hits and the score was 6 to 3. Root outpitched R. Smith in a well-played second game and the score was 4 to 1 in favor of the Cubs.

The up-and-coming Tigers damaged Washington's hold on second place in the American League considerably when they won two games, 7-3 and 13-9. Harry Heilman, Tiger right fielder, got five hits in five times at bat in the second game and hit a single and a home run in the first contest. In the second game, Washington led, 7 to 3 when the Tigers went to bat in the fourth. Detroit couldn't tie the score until the seventh. They scored four in that inning, however, and two in the eighth to win very comfortably.

George Sisler of the Browns batted 1.000 for the second successive day by turning in four hits in four times at bat in yesterday's game with the Red Sox. Miller, St. Louis first baseman, also got four of the team's 18 hits in four "AB's." The score: St. Louis 14; Boston 2.

Ruth's double and Lazzeri's triple in the eighth accounted for three of the Yankee's runs and made it possible for the team to win, 5 to 3, over Cleveland. Ruth had a perfect batting average for the day with three singles in addition to the double.

Cuyler let Partridge's single to center get away from him in the eleventh inning of the Pirates-Brooklyn game and the Robins' second baseman raced home with the winning run. The Pirates made one in the fourth and Brooklyn tied it in the ninth, the final score being Brooklyn 2, Pittsburgh 1.

Cincinnati got 19 hits from three Giant pitchers to win 11 to 3 and give the New Yorkers' chances of catching up with the National league leaders another set-back.

After the score had been tied for six innings, the Cards took advantage of Decatur's wildness in the [illegible] and scored two runs on the Phils to win, 7 to 5. Decatur walked one man and hit another. Two sacrifices and a single by Toporcer brought in the runs that won the game.

Milwaukee, Wis. — Toledo and Milwaukee split a double bill here, Toledo taking the opener, 9 to 4, and Milwaukee winning 8 to 5. Pfeffer was effective on the slab in the first game but poor playing by Lear lost the game to the Toledo Hens. Johnson and Milstead were both relieved in the second game and the Brewers won.

St. Paul, Minn.—St. Paul made it six victories in a row here, defeating the Louisville Colonels, 8 to 2. Heimach was hit for five safeties although effective fielding assisted him to win.

Minneapolis, Minn.—Jim Middleton, pitching for the Minneapolis Millers allowed only five scattered hits and Minneapolis took the third of five games from Indianapolis. Duncan hit a homer in the second frame with none on.

BOBBY JONES RETAINS LEAD FOR CHAMPIONSHIP

TURNS IN CARD OF 72 FOR THE 18 HOLES PLAYED TODAY

PUTS HIM TWO STROKES AHEAD OF B. HODSON, WELSH CHAMPION

St. Andrews, Scotland, July 14.—Bobby Jones retained the lead in the second round of the British Open Golf Championship today.

After a disheartening outward nine of 37 strokes, the defending title holder recovered for a 35 on the homeward nine and his 36-hole aggregate of 140 put him two strokes ahead of B. Hodson, young Welsh champion.

The gallery, numbering at least 5,000, saw Bobby exhibiting the same brilliant golf that gave him a 68 on the first round yesterday. His putts were going down and his approach shots were finding the green almost invariably.

Hodson's rise robbed the Atlantan of some of his glory.

The 20-year-old Tendey club player had 32 on the turn—Jones' score of yesterday—and 70 for the round. It might easily have been a 69 but a little girl got in the way on the 12th hole and spoiled his drive.

WHEN it comes to best sellers, Camel leads them all, because by the greatest number of smokers it is considered the best cigarette.

The closer the search for quality, the greater the preference for Camels. For Camel, made of the choicest Turkish and Domestic tobaccos, is supremely blended to a mellowness, mildness and individuality of taste that is beyond matching or imitation.

If you don't yet know its satisfying smoothness, just try this overwhelming favorite among cigarettes.

TRAIN HITS WASHOUT; 9 COACHES LEAVE M. K. T. TRACKS

Oklahoma City, Okla., July 14.—(UP)—A heavy rain washing ballast from beneath rail and ties, caused derailment of M. K. T. passenger train No. 4, northbound, five miles north of Atoka, Okla., at 5 a. m. today, but no one was injured, according to confirmed reports to the railroad's offices here.

The traffic department said the train was running slow at the time of derailment; that nine day coaches left the rails but remained standing and that the train would be re-railed and moved by noon.

The road through the Atoka region is double-tracked, the accident therefore causing no great traffic interruption.

UNCLOTHED BODIES OF COUPLE FOUND

Kenosha, Wis., July 14.—(UP)—A jug of poisoned wine and a note saying they would rather die than live apart were taken at their face value by authorities investigating the death of Mrs. Hazel Van Patten, 41, and her lover, Joseph Comforte.

The unclothed bodies of the couple were found in a lake cottage near Kenosha. Mrs. Van Patten was the wife of a Kenosha automobile company employe. Her husband, Joseph, said he had known of the love affair between his wife and Comforte.

The wine, which the two apparently had been drinking, was believed to have been poisoned with potassium cyanide. A vial of the death-dealing chemical was found in the cottage.

A coroner's inquest was to be held today at which the double suicide theory, which officials believe most probable, will be further investigated.

The bandit then made an untoward move, according to police, and the patrolmen fired four shots into his body.

McRoberts said the bandit robbed the station twice before.

MINNESOTA

By Howard Everett

God made Minnesota the Garden of Eden of America and placed it in the wonderland of the North. He gave it fertile soil that man might subsist with ease; then blessed it with ten thousand lakes and surrounded these with trees. He called it the home of laughing waters and proclaimed the Mississippi the father of its sparkling streams.

He sweetened its balmy air with the music of song birds and honey bees, and pronounced it the playground of eternal peace and prosperity.

He gave it the beauties of wildwood and graced it with the innocence of wild life. He taught the sunshine to romp with the shadow through the forests and the fragrance of its flowers and fields of clover to mingle with the perfume of its pines.

He filled its lakes with fish, its forests with game, its plains with fowl, and unto these he gave the romance of the Red man.

He made it grow fruits, vegetables, corn and fields of waving grain. Over it He placed a carpet of luxuriant grasses and underneath He planted a store of untold mineral wealth.

He took the scenic beauties of Switzerland and a Cororado and combined them with the fertile soil of an Iowa, and the fascinating climate of a California. To these He added all things else which contribute to the health, happiness and comfort of life, and when He had finished, He called it "Minnesota".

JUDGE ELLIOT TALKS OF PHILIPPINES

Former Justice of Supreme Court of Islands Tells of Experiences

ADDRESSES LOCAL ROTARY

Club Indebted to John L. Smith for Securing Number of Fine Speakers

At the Rotary club last Tuesday one of the first so-called Ojibway park programs was presented. Ojibway park is a summer home addition platted by John L. Smith, of Minneapolis on North Long Lake near Round Lake. The chairman of the program committee is indebted to Mr. Smith for securing a number of fine speakers.

Judge C. B. Elliot, of Minneapolis, acquired his lake shore property five years ago and built a commodious home in Ojibway park provided with all modern conveniences. For the past five years he and his family have spent their summer vacations in this lake country. Judge Elliot was in former years a district court judge in Hennepin county, later a member of the state supreme court, a federal judge, and then in Taft's administration was named one of the court judges comprising the supreme court judiciary of the Philippine Islands.

Many Rotary speakers are striving to gain "atmosphere" for their talks. At a previous meeting E. F. Gates had a Rotary song as a prelude to his talk. On the occasion of Tuesday's program the "atmosphere" was gained by acquiring an attendance of members of the Brainerd bar including Judge A. D. Polk, M. E. Ryan, Donald Ryan, Basil T. Heath, A. J. Sullivan, D. H. Fullerton and others.

In reminiscences Judge Polk recounted the fact that many years ago he was a candidate against Judge Elliot in Minneapolis for municipal judge and was defeated. Basil T. Heath had as a professor in Northwestern College of Law in 1914, Judge Elliot. The judge is also general counsel of the Western Union corporation and defended the company at a case in which M. E. Ryan was attorney for the plaintiff.

Judge Elliot was appointed to the Philippine supreme court judiciary early in the Taft administration. After some few months on the bench he resigned to take place in the island cabinet. In that position he had charge of several bureaus, including supervision over the native constabulary composed of 6,500 native troops and native officers, road and bridge building, etc.

In that regard he mentioned the fact that the United States regular army has no more to do with the Philippine Islands than they have with the State of Minnesota. The entire question of law and order was in charge of Judge Elliot, secretary of that department. He selected five men from the United States army as chiefs, and that his selections were good ones was evidenced that each became a major general in the American Expeditionary Forces fighting in France.

During the three years that Judge Elliot held his post, he travelled into every nook and corner of the islands. Among these eleven million people one finds all degrees of development ranging from men of the highest type, graduates of Harvard, Yale, American Technical Schools, the Sarbonne University of France and other continental universities down to the wild men of the jungles.

In order to properly consider the Philippines Judge Elliot took up early history at the time the United States first found itself in possession of the Islands. Judge Elliot gave some "inside" history in which he claimed that Dewey happened to be at Manila waiting for coal from Honolulu. On such a question as coal hinged our unexpected acquisition of the Islands.

"What shall we do with the Islands now" queried Judge Elliot, "one group sees only the commercial end, another takes the altruistic stand. The Filipinos are struggling for independence. It took 60,000 American troops six months to conquer the island and the toll of death and other costs measured greater than the short war with Spain, in fact it was enormously expensive and troublesome.

"Had we not assumed the role of unexpected possession of the Islands, it is a well known fact, the German fleet was steaming close at hand ready to take them.

"The United States has been assailed at times by uninformed people and charged with having no definite policy regarding the Philippines. I would refer them to the acts and deeds of Presidents McKinley, Roosevelt, Taft, Wilson, and the Jones Act passed by Congress all crystalizing in the assurance that the islands are to be granted independence when they are capable of governing themselves."

"We told them, 'we are here in the interests of your people to aid you in gaining the necessary education to govern yourselves. We are here only in the position of a supervisory government. When in our judgment you are competetent to govern yourselves you will be given independence," said Judge Elliot.

The United States has at all times acted as a trustee and has favored the natives by giving them many positions in trust and importance. At one time Judge Elliot had as high as 17,000 people on the pay roll of his department, less than 10 percent of whom were Americans.

In the public schools there are some 600,000 children and the same type of education governs as in America, kindergarden, primary, grade, high school on up to the University of the Philippines which latter institution has 3,000 students.

Years before hard roads were ever thought of in Minnesota Judge Elliot built 800 miles of paving every bit as good as any found in our state. The road project was developed by Americans but paid for by the Philippine legislature.

The United States at no time has made any appropriations for the aid of the Philippines unless we note one humanitarian instance when several million dollars were given for a famine fund.

The faith of the United States has been pledged that these people shall have their country when they can govern it and the judge said he would deeply resent any movement that Congress shall pass a statute that we own and keep the Philippines. The congress of the United States, of course, has the ultimate decision in the matter.

When President Wilson's administration came into power great changes were made in heads of departments and the Islands came close to a status of almost governing themselves. The few Americans at the head were practically letting the Filipinos have their own way. At the end of the war the Islands had piled up a heavy bonded indebtedness, credit became inflated, banks failed as they did in the United States and Governor-General Harrison, in a way, allowed things to get away from him.

Then Major-General Wood was sent out to check the unparalleled growth of native political power. Under President Wilson the legislature had been made entirely a native elective government. Judge Elliot mentioned the fact that he had known General Wood for many years and though retired from the army many people of this country and the Islands think of him only as a military man.

"You can't give orders to a legislature," said Judge Elliot, "and it takes a lot of tact to deal with suspicious people who in all matters should be coaxed and not compelled to do things.

"And now what shall we do with the Islands?"

"Some people maintain that we have no business whatever out there, that no man is good enough to govern another without his consent. Except a few office holders, few natives have taken the oath of allegiance. They are practically held by military power. Their rights rest on decisions of the United States Congress. Congress can pass a law in two hours and wipe out every bit of legislation and rights the Filipinos have," said the judge.

Some four or five languages are spoken in the Islands and there are four different nationalities.

"It is foolish to talk about mere tribes," said the judge.

"The Filipinos are good people and I like them. They are not our people nor do they think as we do. They are entitled to our respect. It hurts them if we say they are not competent to do things. They should be taught that their economic fortune depends on maintaining friendly relations with the United States, for loss of the American market will break down their present high wage scale.

"If I had my way I would seek passage of an act by Congress, that 25 years from now conditions being satisfactory independence shall be granted the Islands, the United States continuing to take the same interest in the Philippines as it now does in Cuba," said Judge Elliot. In conclusion Judge Elliot told of sanitation and other work carried on by the U. S. including healthy water supply, elimination of smallpox and yellow fever, etc.

JUDGE ELLIOT TALKS OF PHILIPPINES

Former Justice of Supreme Court of Islands Tells of Experiences

ADDRESSES LOCAL ROTARY

Club Indebted to John L. Smith for Securing Number of Fine Speakers

At the Rotary club last Tuesday one of the first so-called Ojibway park programs was presented. Ojibway park is a summer home addition platted by John L. Smith, of Minneapolis on North Long Lake near Round Lake. The chairman of the program committee is indebted to Mr. Smith for securing a number of fine speakers.

Judge C. B. Elliot, of Minneapolis, acquired his lake shore property five years ago and built a commodious home in Ojibway park provided with all modern conveniences. For the past five years he and his family have spent their summer vacations in this lake country. Judge Elliot was in former years a district court judge in Hennepin county, later a member of the state supreme court, a federal judge, and then in Taft's administration was named one of the court judges comprising the supreme court judiciary of the Philippine Islands.

Many Rotary speakers are striving to gain "atmosphere" for their talks. At a previous meeting E. F. Gates had a Rotary song as a prelude to his talk. On the occasion of Tuesday's program the "atmosphere" was gained by acquiring an attendance of members of the Brainerd bar including Judge A. D. Polk, M. E. Ryan, Donald Ryan, Basil T. Heath, A. J. Sullivan, D. H. Fullerton and others.

In reminiscences Judge Polk recounted the fact that many years ago he was a candidate against Judge Elliot in Minneapolis for municipal judge and was defeated. Basil T. Heath had as a professor in Northwestern College of Law in 1914, Judge Elliot. The judge is also general counsel of the Western Union corporation and defended the company at a case in which M. E. Ryan was attorney for the plaintiff.

Judge Elliot was appointed to the Philippine supreme court judiciary early in the Taft administration. After some few months on the bench he resigned to take place in the island cabinet. In that position he had charge of several bureaus, including supervision over the native constabulary composed of 6,500 native troops and native officers, road and bridge building, etc.

In that regard he mentioned the fact that the United States regular army has no more to do with the Philippine Islands than they have with the State of Minnesota. The entire question of law and order was in charge of Judge Elliot, secretary of that department. He selected five men from the United States army as chiefs, and that his selections were good ones was evidenced that each became a major general in the American Expeditionary Forces fighting in France.

During the three years that Judge Elliot held his post, he travelled into every nook and corner of the islands. Among these eleven million people one finds all degrees of development ranging from men of the highest type, graduates of Harvard, Yale, American Technical Schools, the Sarbonne University of France and other continental universities down to the wild men of the jungles.

In order to properly consider the Philippines Judge Elliot took up early history at the time the United States first found itself in possession of the Islands. Judge Elliot gave some "inside" history in which he claimed that Dewey happened to be at Manila waiting for coal from Honolulu. On such a question as coal hinged our unexpected acquisition of the Islands.

"What shall we do with the Islands now" queried Judge Elliot, "one group sees only the commercial end, another takes the altruistic stand. The Filipinos are struggling for independence. It took 60,000 American troops six months to conquer the island and the toll of death and other costs measured greater than the short war with Spain, in fact it was enormously expensive and troublesome.

"Had we not assumed the role of unexpected possession of the Islands, it is a well known fact, the German fleet was steaming close at hand ready to take them.

"The United States has been assailed at times by uninformed people and charged with having no definite policy regarding the Philippines. I would refer them to the acts and deeds of Presidents McKinley, Roosevelt, Taft, Wilson, and the Jones Act passed by Congress all crystalizing in the assurance that the islands are to be granted independence when they are capable of governing themselves."

"We told them, 'we are here in the interests of your people to aid you in gaining the necessary education to govern yourselves. We are here only in the position of a supervisory government. When in our judgment you are competetent to govern yourselves you will be given independence," said Judge Elliot.

The United States has at all times acted as a trustee and has favored the natives by giving them many positions in trust and importance. At one time Judge Elliot had as high as 17,000 people on the pay roll of his department, less than 10 percent of whom were Americans.

In the public schools there are some 600,000 children and the same type of education governs as in America, kindergarden, primary, grade, high school on up to the University of the Philippines which latter institution has 3,000 students.

Years before hard roads were ever thought of in Minnesota Judge Elliot built 800 miles of paving every bit as good as any found in our state. The road project was developed by Americans but paid for by the Philippine legislature.

The United States at no time has made any appropriations for the aid of the Philippines unless we note one humanitarian instance when several million dollars were given for a famine fund.

The faith of the United States has been pledged that these people shall have their country when they can govern it and the judge said he would deeply resent any movement that Congress shall pass a statute that we own and keep the Philippines. The congress of the United States, of course, has the ultimate decision in the matter.

When President Wilson's administration came into power great changes were made in heads of departments and the Islands came close to a status of almost governing themselves. The few Americans at the head were practically letting the Filipinos have their own way. At the end of the war the Islands had piled up a heavy bonded indebtedness, credit became inflated, banks failed as they did in the United States and Governor-General Harrison, in a way, allowed things to get away from him.

"You can't give orders to a legislature," said Judge Elliot, "and it takes a lot of tact to deal with suspicious people who in all matters should be coaxed and not compelled to do things.

"And now what shall we do with the Islands?"

"Some people maintain that we have no business whatever out there, that no man is good enough to govern another without his consent. Except a few office holders, few natives have taken the oath of allegiance. They are practically held by military power. Their rights rest on decisions of the United States Congress. Congress can pass a law in two hours and wipe out every bit of legislation and rights the Filipinos have," said the judge.

Some four or five languages are spoken in the Islands and there are four different nationalities.

"It is foolish to talk about mere tribes," said the judge.

"The Filipinos are good people and I like them. They are not our people nor do they think as we do. They are entitled to our respect. It hurts them if we say they are not competent to do things. They should be taught that their economic fortune depends on maintaining friendly relations with the United States, for loss of the American market will break down their present high wage scale.

"If I had my way I would seek passage of an act by Congress, that 25 years from now conditions being satisfactory independence shall be granted the Islands, the United States continuing to take the same interest in the Philippines as it now does in Cuba," said Judge Elliot. In conclusion Judge Elliot told of sanitation and other work carried on by the U. S. including healthy water supply, elimination of smallpox and yellow fever, etc.

3RD CHAPTER IN THE LIFE OF JACK SHARKEY

JACK SHARKEY IS NO ROUGH NECK AND NO DUMB-BELL

LIKE DEMPSEY HE HAS PICKED UP LOT OF PRACTICAL KNOWLEDGE

By HENRY L. FARRELL
(United Press Staff Correspondent)

New York, July 14. — Whatever may be said of his tendency to admit that he can lick anyone, Jack Sharkey is no rough neck and he is not a dumbbell. Much like Jack Dempsey, whom he is to meet in the Yankee Stadium on Juy 21, he had no college education, but he has picked up a lot of practical knowledge and he doesn't use "dees" and "dems" in his conversation.

He had to leave the parochial school in the eighth grade and went to work when he was fourteen in the Endicott-Johnson shoe factory hookson shoe factory hooking soles to uppers. He worked there for two years and then went to Bridgeport, Conn., where he threw gravel into a concrete mixer. He went back home shortly after and went to work shoveling coal.

He wanted to enlist during the war but his parents objected on account of his age and he left the paternal rook again and came to New York where he went to work as a day laborer. He then got a job in the Jersey City shipyards and went back home in 1919 to the shoe factory.

The following year he left home again and came to New York. He didn't have much luck finding a job and when his funds were gone he followed a gob to the Brooklyn navy yard and enlisted.

He had to do a hitch of one year on the training ship at Newport before he could go to sea and it was there he had his experience as a singer about the marines and his first fight.

When the time came to go to sea he was assigned to the North Carolina, which was taking the Annapolis midshipmen on their training cruise. During the course he had about fifty bouts with boxers on the crew and he finally won the Atlantic Fleet championship on Columbus Day, 1922. He recalls that it was on Columbus Day four years later that he made his great fight against Harry Wills.

That was a fight that always will be talked about for it exploded the fable of the black menace. Wills had been paraded for years as the greatest heavyweight in the ring and no one would fight him until Sharkey came along.

Previous to this time Sharkey was rated little more than a good Boston heavyweight who did most of his fighting around home but when he challenged Wills, the boys started looking up his record.

The record wasn't good enough looking to warrant his bravado and it was recalled that in one fight in New York against Sailor Eddie Huffman his work was questioned and he was called before the commission and told there was a suspicion that he had held up his opponent.

"I beat him, didn't I? Have you got a rule that makes a fighter knock out his man?—I thought they called it boxing in New York."

It was at that time that William Muldoon, the veteran commissioner, looked him over and made the rash prediction that he would be the champion some day. Muldoon drove the Dempsey-Tunney fight out of New York by ticking stubbornly to the contention that Sharkey was the man to fight Dempsey and it was Muldoon who stuck by Sharkey when everyone was yelling that it would be murder and that Wills would feast on another set-up that might ruin the game.

When Sharkey came into the ring he glared right across at Wills. When they were called together for instructions Sharkey looked him over with a sneer and a glare that forced the negro's eyes to the floor.

A microphone was in the corner and Sharkey was asked to say something to the radio listeners.

"I'll knock him out sure as hell," he yelled peering directly at Wills.

He didn't knock him out but he gave Wills the worst beating he ever had taken and forced him to run out on a foul.

Sharkey wept like a child when the referee refused to let them continue. But he was forced to win on a foul.

After winning the Atlantic Fleet championship, Sharkey was matched against Biff Crowley, Pacific Fleet champion. Crowley was a 220-pounder who boasted he had gone six rounds with Dempsey in a sparring match.

They fought seven rounds and the referee ordered an extra round after which Sharkey's hand was raised.

When the fleet returned to Boston Sharkey's time was up and he asked for his discharge. He was asked if he wouldn't remain in the service awhile and try out with the navy candidates for the Olympic team.

He said he needed money badly and couldn't afford to waste so much time and he decided to give up his chances for the Olympic team and pick up a little money fighting.

Three months after his discharg he had his first real professional bout and beat Eddie Record.

His real start will be related in the next chapter.

Southpaws Once Annoyed Clancy

John "Bud" Clancy, the young man who has been holding down first base for the Chicago White Sox, received his early training in the Mint league.

Clancy was one of the best players ever turned out by the Michigan league, and one season, while playing with Muskegon, hit in 40 consecutive games.

Clancy played one year with Grand Rapids and then was signed with Muskegon. He was under option to the White Sox at the time. Clancy had one marked weakness while playing at Muskegon. He could not hit against left-handers.

Wins St. Louis Fans

Frankie Frisch, shown in the photo, who succeeded Rogers Hornsby at second base for the St. Louis Cardinals, has won the hearts of the St. Louis fans by his sensational fielding and heavy hitting. He is playing better this season than he ever did for the New York Giants.

Evil of Self-Consciousness

The self-conscious to hide their sensitiveness assume a sort of aggressive bravado manner that repels and gives them the appearance of being bullies. Underneath this there is a great desire to be thought well of. They wish recognition, and find that this unnatural air creates a certain recognition, even though it is an unfavorable one. —Dr. C. Franklin Leavitt, in Psychology Magazine.

Polishing Surfaces

"Grinding" is a general term. "Lapping" is a method of grinding interior and exterior surfaces in a lathe by friction of lead cylinders or clamps supplied with oil and a fine abrasive powder. The method is used where it is necessary to obtain an exceedingly smooth and polished surface, as in the manufacture of ordnance.

Stagg Relents and Signs for Telephone

Amos Alonzo Stagg was a boy in short pants when Alexander Graham Bell invented the telephone 51 years ago, but only recently has the famous coach capitulated to the invention.

Stagg agreed to have a telephone installed in his home, a mile from the university—but he yielded only half way. It is a one-way phone. He can call out, but nobody can call in.

Stagg, now sixty-three, gets along without a phone all his life because he did not want to be disturbed after going to bed nightly between 8 and 8:30, as is his custom.

HOPI INDIAN SET MARATHON RECORD

Watussi People Cannot Hop in Temperate Climate.

Leading 134 American track stars by 150 yards, a Hopi Indian set a new marathon record recently in a Long Island race. He overcame the handicap of coming from an arid climate 7,000 feet up in the Rockies down to humid sea level.

More records would fall to primitive peoples, according to the report of an American explorer in a communication to the National Geographic society, if the Watussi could jump as successfully in a temperate climate as in the Tropics.

"A line, which could be raised or lowered at will, was stretched between two slender trees standing on an incline," wrote a spectator at track events among the Watussi people of Tanganyika. "The athletes had to run up to this and jump from a small termite heap a foot in height. Despite these unfavorable conditions, exhibitions were given which would place all European efforts in the shade. The best jumpers—slender, but splendid figures, with an almost Indian profile—attained the incredible height of 8 feet 2 inches, and young boys made the relatively no less wonderful performance of five feet.

"Then a number of young Watussi exhibited their remarkable skill in javelin throwing. Taking a run of ten steps, bending backwards almost to the ground, they hurled their javelins up to prodigious heights, and with such impetus that two of the spear-shafts broke in the air from the vibration. It was the same with the shooting-matches with bow and arrow, in which the trunk of a banana tree was used for the butt. The shooting average at 150 feet was really good.

"Great strength is required to bend the bow correctly, and to draw it to its fullest extent long years of practice are necessary. The elasticity of the bow, which is from 4 feet to 4 feet 9 inches in height, is extraordinarily great, and with the bow-string drawn to its fullest extent the arrow flies a distance of 200 paces.

"Running races, too, were organized, but owing to the lack of the necessary measuring instruments I am, unfortunately, not in a position to give the time. I have no doubt, however, that in this department, also the European records were at least equaled."

To Halve Hole in One Is Rare Feat

Only one golfer in a thousand or so ever scored a hole in one, and but eight men in the history of the game have made two holes-in-one in a single round. But there is still a rarer feat, the halving of a hole in one. According to the American Golfer, it has been accomplished twice, once in America and once in England.

3RD CHAPTER IN THE LIFE OF JACK SHARKEY

JACK SHARKEY IS NO ROUGH NECK AND NO DUMB-BELL

LIKE DEMPSEY HE HAS PICKED UP LOT OF PRACTICAL KNOWLEDGE

By HENRY L. FARRELL
(United Press Staff Correspondent)

New York, July 14. — Whatever may be said of his tendency to admit that he can lick anyone, Jack Sharkey is no rough neck and he is not a dumbbell. Much like Jack Dempsey, whom he is to meet in the Yankee Stadium on Juy 21, he had no college education, but he has picked up a lot of practical knowledge and he doesn't use "dees" and "dems" in his conversation.

He had to leave the parochial school in the eighth grade and went to work when he was fourteen in the Endicott-Johnson shoe factory hookson shoe factory hooking soles to uppers. He worked there for two years and then went to Bridgeport, Conn., where he threw gravel into a concrete mixer. He went back home shortly after and went to work shoveling coal.

He wanted to enlist during the war but his parents objected on account of his age and he left the paternal rook again and came to New York where he went to work as a day laborer. He then got a job in the Jersey City shipyards and went back home in 1919 to the shoe factory.

The following year he left home again and came to New York. He didn't have much luck finding a job and when his funds were gone he followed a gob to the Brooklyn navy yard and enlisted.

He had to do a hitch of one year on the training ship at Newport before he could go to sea and it was there he had his experience as a singer about the marines and his first fight.

When the time came to go to sea he was assigned to the North Carolina, which was taking the Annapolis midshipmen on their training cruise. During the course he had about fifty bouts with boxers on the crew and he finally won the Atlantic Fleet championship on Columbus Day, 1922. He recalls that it was on Columbus Day four years later that he made his great fight against Harry Wills.

That was a fight that always will be talked about for it exploded the fable of the black menace. Wills had been paraded for years as the greatest heavyweight in the ring and no one would fight him until Snarkey came along.

Previous to this time Sharkey was rated little more than a good Boston heavyweight who did most of his fighting around home but when he challenged Wills, the boys started looking up his record.

The record wasn't good enough looking to warrant his bravado and it was recalled that in one fight in New York against Sailor Eddie Huffman his work was questioned and he was called before the commission and told there was a suspicion that he had held up his opponent.

"I beat him, didn't I? Have you got a rule that makes a fighter knock out his man?—I thought they called it boxing in New York."

It was at that time that William Muldoon, the veteran commissioner, looked him over and made the rash prediction that he would be the champion some day. Muldoon drove the Dempsey-Tunney fight out of New York by ticking stubbornly to the contention that Sharkey was the man to fight Dempsey and it was Muldoon who stuck by Sharkey when everyone was yelling that it would be murder and that Wills would feast on another set-up that might ruin the game.

When Sharkey came into the ring he glared right across at Wills. When they were called together for instructions Sharkey looked him over with a sneer and a glare that forced the negro's eyes to the floor.

A microphone was in the corner and Sharkey was asked to say something to the radio listeners.

"I'll knock him out sure as hell," he yelled peering directly at Wills.

He didn't knock him out but he gave Wills the worst beating he ever had taken and forced him to run out on a foul.

Sharkey wept like a child when the referee refused to let them continue. But he was forced to win on a foul.

After winning the Atlantic Fleet championship, Sharkey was matched against Biff Crowley, Pacific Fleet champion. Crowley was a 220-pounder who boasted he had gone six rounds with Dempsey in a sparring match.

They fought seven rounds and the referee ordered an extra round after which Sharkey's hand was raised.

When the fleet returned to Boston Sharkey's time was up and he asked for his discharge. He was asked if he wouldn't remain in the service awhile and try out with the navy candidates for the Olympic team.

He said he needed money badly and couldn't afford to waste so much time and he decided to give up his chances for the Olympic team and pick up a little money fighting.

Three months after his discharg he had his first real professional bout and beat Eddie Record.

His real start will be related in the next chapter.

Southpaws Once Annoyed Clancy

John "Bud" Clancy, the young man who has been holding down first base for the Chicago White Sox, received his early training in the Mint league.

Clancy was one of the best players ever turned out by the Michigan league, and one season, while playing with Muskegon, hit in 40 consecutive games.

Clancy played one year with Grand Rapids and then was signed with Muskegon. He was under option to the White Sox at the time. Clancy had one marked weakness while playing at Muskegon. He could not hit against left-handers.

Wins St. Louis Fans

Frankie Frisch, shown in the photo, who succeeded Rogers Hornsby at second base for the St. Louis Cardinals, has won the hearts of the St. Louis fans by his sensational fielding and heavy hitting. He is playing better this season than he ever did for the New York Giants.

Evil of Self-Consciousness

The self-conscious to hide their sensitiveness assume a sort of aggressive bravado manner that repels and gives them the appearance of being bullies. Underneath this there is a great desire to be thought well of. They wish recognition, and find that this unnatural air creates a certain recognition, even though it is an unfavorable one. —Dr. C. Franklin Leavitt, in Psychology Magazine.

Polishing Surfaces

"Grinding" is a general term. "Lapping" is a method of grinding interior and exterior surfaces in a lathe by friction of lead cylinders or clamps supplied with oil and a fine abrasive powder. The method is used where it is necessary to obtain an exceedingly smooth and polished surface, as in the manufacture of ordnance.

Stagg Relents and Signs for Telephone

Amos Alonzo Stagg was a boy in short pants when Alexander Graham Bell invented the telephone 51 years ago, but only recently has the famous coach capitulated to the invention.

Stagg agreed to have a telephone installed in his home, a mile from the university—but he yielded only half way. It is a one-way phone. He can call out, but nobody can call in.

Stagg, now sixty-three, got along without a phone all his life because he did not want to be disturbed after going to bed nightly between 8 and 8:30, as is his custom.

HOPI INDIAN SET MARATHON RECORD

Watussi People Cannot Hop in Temperate Climate.

Leading 134 American track stars by 150 yards, a Hopi Indian set a new marathon record recently in a Long Island race. He overcame the handicap of coming from an arid climate 7,000 feet up in the Rockies down to humid sea level.

More records would fall to primitive peoples, according to the report of an American explorer in a communication to the National Geographic society, if the Watussi could jump as successfully in a temperate climate as in the Tropics.

"A line, which could be raised or lowered at will, was stretched between two slender trees standing on an incline," wrote a spectator at track events among the Watussi people of Tanganyika. "The athletes had to run up to this and jump from a small termite heap a foot in height. Despite these unfavorable conditions, exhibitions were given which would place all European efforts in the shade. The best jumpers—slender, but splendid figures, with an almost Indian profile—attained the incredible height of 8 feet 2 inches, and young boys made the relatively no less wonderful performance of five feet.

"Then a number of young Watussi exhibited their remarkable skill in javelin throwing. Taking a run of ten steps, bending backwards almost to the ground, they hurled their javelins up to prodigious heights, and with such impetus that two of the spear-shafts broke in the air from the vibration. It was the same with the shooting-matches with bow and arrow, in which the trunk of a banana tree was used for the butt. The shooting average at 150 feet was really good.

"Great strength is required to bend the bow correctly, and to draw it to its fullest extent long years of practice are necessary. The elasticity of the bow, which is from 4 feet to 4 feet 9 inches in height, is extraordinarily great, and with the bow-string drawn to its fullest extent the arrow flies a distance of 200 paces.

"Running races, too, were organized, but owing to the lack of the necessary measuring instruments I am, unfortunately, not in a position to give the time. I have no doubt however, that in this department, also the European records were at least equaled."

To Halve Hole in One Is Rare Feat

Only one golfer in a thousand or so ever scored a hole in one, and but eight men in the history of the game have made two holes-in-one in a single round. But there is still a rarer feat, the halving of a hole in one. According to the American Golfer, it has been accomplished twice, once in America and once in England.
